NUMBER 48

THE EDITOR SAYS—

We have been requested by Layton Finley to not print any more in our paper than necessary in the matter of his complicity in a chicken stealing case. All right Layton, we will print just the minimum amount necessary to inform the public with the true status of the case. Layton, as you know, was turned over to his parents for a period of a year under suspended sentence, pending continued good behavior. That is fine for his reputation, for other relatives more or less in the public eye. But what about the other two boys who unfortunately were turned over to Stoddard County authorities who do not deal as gently and as "humanely" with chicken thieves? Both of these young men, just as good, just as honest, just as fine, and both with parents as human, and as full of motherly and fatherly love for their youngsters, what about their lot? They have two more years in the school of correction. We have no axe to grind on their behalf, nor are we blood thirsty for vengeance to be wrecked upon young Finley, but if his future record is as unblemished as his past, he will join his companions at Alcoa, and this newspaper will take pleasure in recording that fact. We do this in full realization of the fact that the entire family will feel harshly towards us, but facts as uncovered place the finger of suspicion dangerously near the front doorstep of the young man whose alleged good record, and the honest and earnest promise of his mother, earned for him a stay of execution.

Wheeler and Woolsey in "So This is Africa", on at the Malone Theatre Sunday and Monday nights, was said to be funny and nasty. It is a pity movie producers do not give us fewer nasty and suggestive pictures and more of the sort that leave a sweet taste in the mouth. This sort of pictures should not be laid at the door of the Malone Theatre manager because he has no choice in what is sent him under his contract. The criticism should be at Will Hayes' door for passing such.

We heard a man say, Monday, that a stone could be thrown from Front Street near Dudley's and fall on the roof of a house where booze could be purchased by the drink or in quantities. We don't believe this.

In the Charlie Johnson yard on East Malone Avenue is a pussy-willow tree as high as the house that was in full bloom Tuesday morning. Swarms of honey bees were enjoying the fragrance of these blooms and a dozen or two sparrows were enjoying the sweetness of the honey bees. The birds would catch the bees in their beak, give them a pinch and let them fall to the ground, then light and eat the delicate morsal.

More and better beer is the cry and at the same time it will bring in a large amount of taxes. This is one luxury that we'll pay mighty few pennies on.

Whenever we see the numerous bill boards again covered with pictures of pretty girls wearing few clothes, chewing gum and drinking belly wash, we'll believe the depression is being forgotten.

Mr. Roosevelt stepped to the microphone last night and knocked another home run. His message was not only a great comfort to the people, but it pointed the way to all radio announcers and public speakers what to do with a big vocabulary, leave it at home in the dictionary. Some people spend a lifetime juggling with words, with not an idea in a carload. Our president took such a dry subject as banking, (and when I say "dry" I mean dry, for if it had been liquid, he wouldn't have had to speak on it at all). Well, he made everybody understand it, even the bankers.—Will Rogers.

A scrip issue does not seem so likely as it did a few days ago, but if scrip is used, either widely or restrictedly, it will carry a weight that will be nation-wide. Conducting business on a scrip basis, or on any equivalent convenient money basis, is far better than conducting business by means of the old-time shaky State bank bills, under the vogue of which a person had to look up a bank in the "coin detector" before deciding whether to accept a bill or turn it down. Yet things went forward in those days, and they will go forward now. We have been riding a storm of suspicion and uncertainty. The federal government wisely has provided a haven to which all may retire until the gale is past. The wisdom of the people in accepting quietly the relief made available speaks well for the American character.

U. S. Senate Approves Economy Measure Wed. By Overwhelming Vote

After three days and two nights of debate the Senate Wednesday night approved the bill granting President Roosevelt power to reduce veterans' benefits and federal pay to the extent of more than $500,000,000. The vote was 62 to 13, and sent the measure back to the House for approval of a number of minor Senate amendments. The House last Saturday passed the bill by a vote of 266 to 138, and approval is expected, provided the amendments meet with the approval of the president. National leaders expected the signature of the chief executive by tonight (Thursday).

DRAFT STATE BILL
An administration economy measure readjusting salaries in all departments of the State government was approved by the Missouri State Senate Wednesday by a roll call vote of 27-3.

Destitute Family Found Living In Boxcar Here

A man and woman and two children, a boy and girl, were found "bunking" in a railway box car on a side track of the Frisco Lines early Thursday morning by Dan McCoy, who had gone to the car to make preparation to ship a load of corn. The woman was lying ill upon the floor of the car with a scanty amount of bed clothing under her. Upon examination local doctors said that she was suffering with a serious case of cancer.

After questioning the man, it was learned that they had been sent here from Blytheville, Ark., in a destitute condition, and left there with no place to go. No mention was made of a home, but they said they had been on their way to points north of here, but later told members of the charity committee of the local Board of Aldermen that they would like to go to or near Hot Springs, Ark. Arrangements were made Thursday afternoon to send the family as far as Poplar Bluff, where they might be picked up and sent to points nearer their destination.

Ben Hart, Negro, Gets Three Years For Series of Home Burglaries

Ben Hart, negro of this city, was sentenced Monday in Scott County Circuit Court to serve three years following his plea of guilty to charges of burglary. Two other charges were waived.

Hart and two other negro lads, were arrested February 13 in connection with the recovery of approximately $1000 worth of men's and women's clothing, which over a period of several months, had been stolen from city and rural homes. Hart has served one term in the State prison for chicken theft, and was being held on a similar charge in addition to the burglary writ when arraigned in court Monday.

Archie Cook, farmer living south of Sikeston, recognized a topcoat belonging to his son, Monday afternoon, February 13, and caused the arrest of the young negro, who was wearing the garment. Officers searched the cabin occupied by the negro Robert Grays and spent a busy night searching other shacks, recovering hundreds of stolen articles from the Ben Hart and Grays cabin.

Terry Davis, a juvenile, charged with attempting to sell a stolen chicken, and with taking a pistol, pleaded guilty Monday. The court deferred punishment and placed Davis in custody of Hubert Boyer, local garage owner.

In the case of Herbert M. Evans and others vs. Mary Larkin, the case was dismissed by plaintiffs at the cost.

The case of James A. Finch, receiver for the First National Bank vs. John Halter, was continued to next term of court by agreement.

March Wind Hits Semo and Tennessee Towns Tuesday

High winds and hail on Tuesday came in strange contrast to a mid-summer day, Monday, ripped thru a corner of Southeast Missouri and swung into Tennessee and Kentucky leaving in its wake, 36 known dead, 200 wounded, and damaging property to the extent of $1,000,000.

At Caruthersville the tornado dipped in about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon crumbled one wing of the Southeast Missouri Congress Company, a vacant building formerly occupied by the Menzie Shoe Co., and damaged residence property. The damage was variously estimated at from $25,000 to $50,000, although no lives were lost.

Six miles south of Kennett, Mrs. Rance James, 40, was swept from the front porch of her home. The resulting fall broke her right leg just above the ankle. She received treatment in a Memphis hospital.

Then the twister whirled across the river and struck a path through Tennessee and Kentucky.

Park Legalizes Beer In Missouri; Measure Now Awaits Federal Action

Missouri joined the list of thirteen States which to date have legalized beer. The return of the popular, foamy beverage awaits formal approval by the Federal Government, and action along that line is expected momentarily, with the possibility of having beer on tap by April 3.

Governor Park signed the Brogan-Roberts bill Wednesday, making it legal to manufacture 3.2 per cent beer in the State. In other words breweries can resume operations as soon as Congress makes the necessary modifications in the Volstead act. Similar action is pending in 24 other State legislatures.

In the meantime, breweries in this State and other parts of the country are making necessary preparations. Grain, barrels, caps and bottles, cases and new machinery are being purchased, or in the thirteen States which now await action by Congress are: Missouri, New Jersey, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, California, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Montana, Maryland, Delaware and Arizona.

FACULTY STAGES ANNUAL BANQUET FOR HOOPSTERS

Members of the local school faculty entertained members of the two high school basketball squads with a banquet Wednesday evening in the Home Economics room. Following the banquet members of the teams went to the home of Miss Jenalee Seils, where they spent the rest of the evening.

CHARGE FOR HELPING FARMERS APPLYING FOR LOANS IS PROHIBITED

Farmers who apply for loans this year from the $90,000,000 fund authorized by Congress for crop production loans, should refuse to pay any fees for help in the preparation of their loan applications, it was declared by H. F. Clinger, Field Inspector of the Crop Production Loan office, stationed at Sikeston care of Harry A. Smith.

The law as enacted by Congress this year specifically prohibits the charging of any fee for the preparation of the application. Mr. Clinger explained, and provides for fine or imprisonment, or both, for any person found guilty of assessing such a charge. Notarial fees, however, are still necessary, as are fees charged by the county recording official for recording the lien given in security for the loan, and for searching the records for prior liens.

Prospective borrowers need not write to Washington for application blanks and detailed information about the loans. Mr. Clinger said, but may get that material direct from him.

The application blank this year requires a statement of the amount of the loan desired, the number of acres for which seed and fertilizer are to be purchased, the amount desired for feed, and the amount desired for fuel and oil for tractors. The application also requires a statement of the amount of the loan which is to be used for making repairs or for the purchase of other supplies. The sum total of these several items must not exceed the maximum rates per acre specified in the regulations.

A legal description of the land on which the crops are to be planted is also required, together with a statement of the acreage of crops grown by the applicant in 1932, and the yields obtained. The applicant is required to file a statement of seed on hand at the time of applying for a loan.

To obtain the loan, the application blank stipulates, the applicant must agree to use the money loaned only for the purchase of supplies necessary for crop production in 1933 on the land described. Prospective borrowers must also state that they have neither the means nor the credit with which to secure these production supplies, and that unless the loan is granted, they will be unable to farm in 1933.

Significant differences between the 1933 and 1932 regulations governing crop production loans are that this year the maximum permitted to any one borrower is $300, and that, to qualify for a loan, borrowers must agree to reduce their acreage of cash crops 30 per cent below their 1932 acreage, provided their farming operations are above a specified minimum. As in 1932, a first lien on the 1933 crop is required. Loans are to be repaid on or before October 31, 1933. The regulations make it unlawful for any person to dispose of or assist in disposing of any crops grown as security for any crop loan, except for the account of the Secretary of Agriculture and provide for fine and imprisonment for violation of such requirement. The regulations require each borrower to agree to plant a garden for home use and to plant sufficient acreage to provide necessary livestock feed.

NEW YORK POLICE CALL FOR ALLEGED AUTO THIEF CAPTURED HERE RECENTLY

Representatives of the New York police department arrived in this city Thursday afternoon, and accompanied Arnold Wragge, alleged automobile thief back to the eastern city. Wragge was arrested Wednesday, March 8, when he attempted to trade a spare wheel for gasoline at Jack Matthews' garage here. The young man held since then in the county jail, is alleged to have confessed driving away from a New York garage with a Studebaker automobile entrusted to his care by his employers. It is the property of Dr. Sidney Van DeCar of the Bronx.

NO GOLD HOARDERS FOUND IN SIKESTON

Local banks reported the receipt of small amounts of gold coins deposited "for patriotic reasons" by their customers during the past few days. However, there were no unusually large amounts returned which might be classified as having been hoarded under the provisions of a regulation issued by the secretary of the treasury.

The regulation as released by the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis requests member banks: "to prepare and forward to the Federal Reserve Bank as soon as possible after March 17, as complete a list as can be made from information obtainable of the names and addresses of all persons who have withdrawn gold from this bank or a member bank in this district since February 1, 1933 and who have not redeposited it in a bank on or before March 17, 1933."

Cape Girardeau banks reported the receipt of approximately $11,500 of the basic metal since the request for its return.

NIGHT CHIEF GID DANIELS RESUMES JOB

Gid Daniels, who has been off duty for the past three months, or since December 13, last year, resumed his work as night policeman last Monday night. Daniels stopped a bullet fired by the late Lewellyn J. Hunter, Memphis gunman, who shot his way to freedom after the night policeman and a Highway trooper had escorted him to Senebaw's garage for questioning. Bill Carson had been appointed to serve in Daniels' place during his absence.

TELEPHONE COMPANY IS CO-OPERATING WITH PLAN TO BUY INTERN'TL SHOES

Sikeston patrons of the Southeast Missouri Telephone Company this month noticed that statements carried a new slogan. It is "Buy International Shoes made in Sikeston—75", and is one item in a general campaign underway to induce more persons to wear shoes made by a branch locally. The "75" posted on billboards, found on desks, and on coat lapels refers to the seventy-five million dollar sales quota set for 1933 by the company.

A BAD MAN RECAPTURED AFTER JAIL BREAK

Blackie Williams, wanted on a dozen charges ranging from plain, ordinary burglary to larceny of interstate shipments who escaped from the Hillsboro, Mo., jail last Sunday night, was recaptured by the sheriff 24 hours later at Sulphur Springs. Williams, who is being held for a minor local charge at Hillsboro, is also wanted by a dozen Missouri and Arkansas communities, and by Federal agents.

WOEHLCKE NAMED AS COMMITTEE MEMBER FOR NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

Wm. H. Woehlecke, local horticulturist and greenhouse owner, was recently notified of his appointment as a member of the Missouri Co-operative Committee for the 14th National Flower and Garden Show which will be held at the Arena in St. Louis, March 25 to April 2.

Missouri Day has been designated on Wednesday, March 29. The show is one of the greatest educational exhibitions held annually in the United States. It operates under authority of a charter granted by Congress and comes to a city only once in a lifetime.

The 1933 show will occupy approximately 160,000 square feet of floor space, and it is estimated that the value of the displays will be considerably over $1,000,000. A total of $25,000 in cash prizes will be awarded for the best exhibits.

Shoe Factory to Open March 27

According to W. L. Hutters, local International Shoe Factory manager, the plant here will be open Monday, March 27. An order to that effect, rescinding previous orders to open Monday, the 20th, was received by Mr. Hutters Thursday morning. The factory was closed temporarily on March.

Both Sikeston banks were permitted by the State Finance Department to open their doors for business Wednesday morning, following a Nation-wide cessation of banking business proclaimed by the President on March 4. The Bank of Sikeston received its permit from the State Department, allowing operation in an unrestricted basis.

According to officers of the institution, the bank accepted more deposits Wednesday than on any other previous day in its history. On the other hand, checks written against accounts at the bank were less than the normal total of an average Saturday. In other words, there were no unusual withdrawals. In fact, one regulation provided for by the government, that of restricting withdrawals intended for hoarding did not have to be enforced. Business transacted involved a large total amount of money but the entire "first day" went smoothly and orderly at both institutions.

A permit issued by the State Finance Department is posted in the lobby of the Bank of Sikeston. It provides as follows:

This proclamation applies only to banks and trust companies licensed by the Commissioner of Finance to open for business and not otherwise restricted.

PROCLAMATION
Pursuant to the authority granted by the Legislature of the State of Missouri and the Proclamation of the President of the United States, we hereby notify your institution that you are authorized to open for the purposes of

1. Performing such banking functions as may be performed by banks in your territory which are members of the Federal Reserve System.

2. Which your bank may desire to perform under its charter, subject to the following restrictions:

(a) No gold coin, gold bullion or gold certificate shall be paid out.
(b) You shall not engage in or permit any transaction in foreign exchange, except such as may be undertaken for legitimate and normal business requirements, for reasonable traveling and other personal requirements, and for the fulfillment of contracts entered into prior to March 6, 1933.

(c) Or permit any withdrawal of currency for hoarding.

(d) Or permit withdrawal of money by any depositor for the purpose of investing same in stocks, securities or other similar investments, unless in the fulfillment of contracts or obligations entered into prior to March 6, 1933.

(e) Or permit the withdrawal of any money to be deposited in another bank, trust company or other depository for the purpose of shifting the account from your bank to such depository.

3. You are authorized to permit customers of your bank to check against balances for necessary business transactions in the due course of business of the customer, except as herein set forth.

This order shall be in full force and effect until further notice, March 13, 1933.

GUY B. PARK, Governor
O. H. MOBERLY, Commissioner of Finance
Att. DWIGHT H. BROWN, Secretary of State

The Sikeston Trust Company received permission from the State Banking Department by wire Wednesday morning to open under a restricted withdrawal basis, under which old accounts are subject to a withdrawal of 5 per cent.

All new deposits, those dating from Wednesday, March 15, are subject to full withdrawal or handling in the usual banking manner. There are no restrictions, in other words, on new deposits.

Under the regulations imposed by the State Department, the bank is not permitted to make loans until further notice. All money received on new deposits is kept in cash, government bonds, or in reserve with an approved depository, and is subject to no restrictions whatsoever.

In explanation of the restricted withdrawal proposition, officers of the bank cited the example of a small account. If the total old deposits amounted to $100, the customer would be permitted to check out 5 per cent of that amount, or $5.00. After that the account would be temporarily closed until further notification to the Trust Company by the State Department of Finance to release additional funds.

At least 125 banks or Trust Companies in the State of Missouri are operating at present under similar restrictions.

Officers of the Trust Company reported that their customers displayed a fine spirit of co-operation in the face of the restricted operating order. A relatively large amount of new business was reported under orderly conditions.

Due to the fact that the financial channels of the Nation were closed entirely for more than a week, it will take a few days to work off the peak load under which all financial institutions are working, it was stated. A huge amount of business, held in check during the holiday, is suddenly being released, but employees of both banks "cleaned house" during the period of recess, and in a measure, were prepared for the rush.

TWO BOYS WHO STOLE CHICKENS IN PRISON; THIRD LAD IS FREED

Layton Finley, charged with chicken theft, appeared in Juvenile Court before Judge Frank Kelly Tuesday afternoon and walked out with a deferred sentence, although his two buddies in the hen roost escaped of February 15, are in-carcated for two years in the Intermediate Reformatory known as Alcoa Farms, near Jefferson City.

Finley was represented by Ray Lucas, attorney, who stood by while M. E. Montgomery, prosecuting attorney, outlined the case. The facts, as stated in court, were that two other Sikeston boys drove out to the Finley farm about 5:30 o'clock, brought the lad to town, and later drove back with him.

After completing his chores, he was rejoined by his two buddies, and the trio then went to the Elmer Grant farm nearby. They were reasonably sure, it was pointed out that the Grant and Finley families were at the Richwoods church, participating in a supper and entertainment. After knocking on the Grant door to make sure no one was at home, the lads slipped in, and the three boys proceeded to kill the chicken. The animal was killed, and the rider, James Jones, son of the late J. R. Jones, who died three months ago, was injured. He received treatment from Dr. T. C. McClure here for scalp and body wounds, and was removed to his home north of the city that same evening. Friends today reported that his condition was satisfactory. Smith was not held.

to split the proceeds three ways, one-half to the boy owning the car, and one-fourth to each of the other two. Layton did not collect his fourth share, because Stoddard County authorities caused the arrest of Herbert Bandy and J. W. Cox, and recovered $9.92, the entire proceeds of the sale, before the split could be made.

The court was informed that Mr. Grant had recovered his prize birds, and that the Dexter commission house had been repaid. In view of the fact that this was Layton's first appearance in court, and on promise of future good conduct, Judge Kelly deferred sentence for one year, and placed the boy under his mother's care.

TRUCK KILLS HORSE WOUNDS RIDER MONDAY

Andy Smith of Marked Tree, Ark., moving to Cape Girardeau by truck, ran into a horse and rider about 5:30 o'clock last Monday afternoon about seven miles north of this city. The animal was killed, and the rider, James Jones, son of the late J. R. Jones, who died three months ago, was injured. He received treatment from Dr. T. C. McClure here for scalp and body wounds, and was removed to his home north of the city that same evening. Friends today reported that his condition was satisfactory. Smith was not held.

ELECTRIC RATES

The story of utility company practices, like the ancient ragman song, is the same old story in the same old way. Salem's municipal electric plant this week cut the light rate in half and is still making money on its investment. Sikeston can relate the same story. The utility company on the other hand will point out that this policy of rate reduction is in line with general practice, and perhaps it is, but it is significant that it is more noticeable, and requests for rate revisions downward are met with more alacracy when municipal ownership, or even talk of it, enters the field. Sikeston still remembers its top step of 13 cents per KWH; then 10 cents, 9 cents and now 8 cents. Salem is proud of its rate, but it cannot even begin to compare with the local rate. Salem receives 10c for the first 50 KWH, Sikeston asks 8 cents for the first 20; Salem has a flat rate of 8 cents for all excess of 50 KWH, whereas the local plant and utility company asks 6c for the second 20 KWH, and 3c for all excess.

It should be pointed out that in 1924 when the Missouri General Utilities Co., operated the Salem plant rates were 20 cents per kilowatt for the first 10 KWH. By the time the municipal plant was put into operation in the Fall of 1925, the top step had dropped 5 cents. Now it is down to a dime, which Salem customers consider very reasonable, as compared with the 33 1/2 per cent higher rate.

Those who have not taken the trouble to find out might ask why?

The answer is that municipal electric plants are not required to pay tribute to the huge superstructure of holding companies and mythical financial setups. An instance is at hand. It is no secret. The president of the Missouri Utilities Company recently visited Sikeston. He was an affable gentleman. He is also a vice-president of the Community Light and Power Company which renders certain "services" to the Missouri Utilities Company and other subsidiaries. If the records could be run, it would be found that there is another, a super-holding company, another part of the superstructure to which the Missouri, the Missouri-Arkansas and other high line companies pay a certain per centum of their yearly profits and those profits must come out of earnings, and earnings are based upon rates, which are based upon a per cent of replacement and operating costs. So that Jones finally pays a three-way bill when he pays one.

The Community Light and Power Company renders the following services for which the Sikeston, the Charleston, the Cape Girardeau and other customers of the Missouri Utilities Company pays:

It offers an accounting service, a purchasing service, new business and advertising service, power engineering service, inspection, corporate, legal, treasury and financial service, and furnishes a central office (in St. Louis) "from which are directed the affairs of Missouri Utilities Company in the communities in which it operates".

On the other hand, the Holding Company, a step removed higher up than the Community Light and Power, furnishes the machinery for financial backing, issuing and floating bond and stock issues, etc. For that "service" the customer also pays.

A concrete example: The Missouri Utilities Company in 1929 according to an audit by the Public Service Commission, manufactured its electricity ready for distribution at a net production cost of 0.886 per KWH. During that same period the Missouri Utilities in Sikeston was receiving from an ordinary household consumer, a rate of 10c for the first 20 KWH ($2.00), which cost the M. U. Co. 17.72c 6c for the next 20 KWH (cost consumer $1.20, cost M. U. Co. 17.72c) and three cents for all in excess of that amount. (214 KWH cost consumer $6.42, cost M. U. Co. $1.896).

Total cost to consumer $9.62, total cost of generating necessary electricity $2.25.

Almost any business could survive under such conditions.

But the process is removed one step further. Take for instance, the so-called "southern group". What is being paid the parent company for juice now is not known, but in 1929 the cost paid by the company to the company was 4.65c per KWH. It was then resold to the consumer at from 12c down to 2 per KWH.

But to get back to our example. An item that cost $2.00 was sold for $6.00, a spread of $4.00 which in any ordinary business would be considered an ample and sufficient profit. But in the utility business that $4.00 must pay for too many idle horses.

That brings us to a significant statement made by a member of the Board of Public Works in our own city of Sikeston last week.

In speaking of the tremendous spread between generating and distribution costs, and the final sale price to the consumer, this gentleman said: "If Sikeston had its plant paid for now it could sell electricity at one-half of its present figure and still make a reasonable return on its investment".

In the utility game that time never comes. The capital stock is never wiped out, although 12 1/2% of gross revenues is annually figured in for rate making purposes for "depreciation less current maintenance". At that rate, it would take approximately eight years to pay for every line, every pole, every generator, and other items of fixed equipment. At the expiration of that time it would seem reasonable that one of two things would happen, either there would be an entire replacement of equipment, or there would be a substantial reduction to fixed charges upon which rates are based.

The folks at Salem have learned their lesson, and the folks around Sikeston are rapidly learning theirs. There are a few, of course, who are still connected in a business, social or family way with the corporation, but in the main those who preach loyalty to home industry are patronizing home industry.

The State Public Service Commission rulings hold that companies of this type should be permitted to make a fair and equitable return (6 or 7 per cent) on their investment. But we fail to find anywhere an accurate statement of what constitutes the investment.

On one sheet of "operating expenses", we find such items as Donation to Ely Walker & Co., factory at Illmo $1500; donation to Southeast Missouri Hospital, Forfelt-Illmo, total contributions (4 items) $2,282.18. "Salary and expenses of W. E. Brewer for assistance in efforts to purchase municipal plants at Maddox, Jackson and New Madrid, $576.15". Election expenses at Oran, Benton, Illmo, and dues in YMCA and Chambers of Commerce $280.65". Those items appear on the audit of the Public Service Commission but were not allowed to be added as operating expense items although so charged.

No wonder Mr. Insull can retire to Greece on a $6000-per-year pension paid by one of his many holding companies.

The earthquake at Long Beach, Calif., and surrounding territory, brings to mind a story of the Federal Building in San Francisco

during the earthquake in that city several years ago. It was in the midst of the worst of the calamity and about the only building that withstood the tremors. In the same city the Government at a later date authorized the erection of a Custom House to cost several million dollars. The contract was let, the foundation laid, when, lo and behold, the contractor found that during the night a great section of the foundation had disappeared. Engineers decided that at one time an arm of the sea had extended under this corner of the building, leaving a bed of quicksand with a crust over it. The heavy foundation broke through the crust and sunk so deep it could not be found. The longest piling would not hold and it was necessary to sink a criss-cross mat of T-iron and concrete until no more could be swallowed before the foundation could be completed. This brings on more public building talk. The Government erected a Custom House in Chicago that cost several million dollars when completed and a few days before it was to be occupied, a large section of the granite cornice broke loose and fell to the sidewalk, large cracks appeared throughout the building, on the other side of the city blocks of buildings bulged up and cracked. The best engineers to be had in the United States were consulted and it was discovered that the solid granite Custom House had been built over a quicksand pocket that ran under the city to the weak spot that bulged up from the immense weight. The unoccupied new building was sold to the Chicago House Wrecking Co. and torn down.

Few things that have occurred during the present generation reflect greater credit upon the American people than the poise and calmness with which the closing of the banks, by President Roosevelt, was received. There were no signs of hopelessness and terror, no congregating at street corners, no closing of places of business. The work of the land, although crippled, went forward as usual. The assurance manifested was not the assurance that disaster would follow, but, rather, the assurance that relief was ahead. There is a general readiness to accept a new medium of exchange, and to cooperate with the government in relieving a situation which, although not all that might be desired, might have been infinitely worse.

In view of the fast driving that is being done in the Orient, one wonders whether there is any connection between the names Jehol and Jehu.

It is a mighty poor way to be easy in a newspaper on anyone by using veiled threats. The sympathy of the editor of this paper has always been with those in distress, but we dislike very much to be told to go slow on what we print, if it be true. We'll keep our eye open and our powder dry.

CHAPTER VII

By FRANCES MARION

From Which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Has Made a Thrilling Motion Picture Starring Marion Davies.

Many months had passed since Blondie last saw Lottie, and this meeting had come so unexpectedly. Standing there in the center of the living room, Blondie blinked hard several times. Could this beautifully groomed woman be her old tenement pal? And then Lottie, ignoring Pete's wisecrack, the sullen look from Pa McClune, and the envious eyes of Gert and Ma McClune, spoke rather loftily to her old friend.

"Well, Blondie, what about you, my dear?"

"That broke the spell. It really was Lottie!"

"What about YOU?" Blondie retorted, and very sincerely added, "You look swell, Mug."

"Mug?—Ho! Ho!—It seems years, doesn't it?" Lottie tried her best to keep her poise. Gert helped some by picking up the new baby.

"See the new addition. And his name's Horace," said Gert, showing the name too clean and homely youngster right at Lottie.

"Pretty—" Lottie started the usual praises, but Gert picked up the end of her fur.

"Is that real silver fox?" asked Gert. Blondie seized the opportunity, reaching for the other end of the rickpie.

"Yes—it is, isn't it?"—to Lottie.

"What are you all talking about?" said Lurline, vexed and eager to get away. It was quite evident that she wasn't appreciated by the McClune family.

"I guess you've gotta go, haven't you?" Blondie said, trying to relieve the situation.

Lottie jumped at the opportunity. "Indeed I have. I'm late already—and a couple of ambassadors and other gentlemen are coming for cocktails. She fluttered a real lace handkerchief under her nose, a nose that could no longer endure the odor of cornbeef and cabbage.

"My, what elegant perfume," said Ma, who came in quickly from the kitchen. "I can smell it even out here."

"Yeh—I got a load of that," declared Pete, as he sniffed several times very noticeably. "It makes you go goose-flesh. What do they call it?"

"It's an essence mixed specially for me," and Lurline shook her handkerchief toward Blondie, saying: "Refreshing, isn't it."

"What a swell smell," said Blondie, taking a deep breath.

"It's called Un Nuit d'Amour, which means, my dear, but Blondie interrupted her.

"Come on," she motioned to Lurline, eager to get away from her father's cold, searching eyes.

"Oh, you've changed your name," said Pa, "you're married."

Mrs. Callahan proudly answered the question.

"Of course it is."

There were admiring "Oh's" and "Ah's" from the women, while Pa moved around filling his pipe for the want of something better to do. Lurline never stopped eating.

It was Mrs. Callahan's opportunity again, and she took advantage of it, suddenly lifting up Lottie's skirt.

"Want to see something grand?" and the proud mother reached for the garment underneath. "Lace!—Real, old lace!" she bragged, much to Lottie's embarrassment.

"Mother!" exclaimed Lottie, but she permitted the display.

"You can't wash it," Mrs. Callahan continued. "It's gotta be dry cleaned. Shame to hide it under your skirt."

"An' that ain't all it's a shame to hide," piped up Pete, balancing a forkful of food as he stared at Lottie.

Blondie ended the fashion show by pulling Lottie over to the window.

"Have those shoes made for you?" asked Blondie.

"No. I found a darling little shop, just off Madison—such a quaint Frenchman—he imports!" Lottie was talking affably to Blondie now.

"Oh, yeah!" Blondie was quite sincerely taken with the idea.

"Follies pay you a lot, don't they?" sarcastically from Gert who could hold back no longer.

"Well, now—" Lottie started to answer when Pete cut in.

"Why shouldn't a lady have a side line?"

There was a dead, awkward silence. Pete laughed, almost self-consciously, and Blondie spoke up.

"What was that crack meant for?" Gert, the baby on her hip, turned to Blondie: "You heard—" she started. Then, Pete, realizing that this was going too far for his own comfort, interrupted:

"Ain't I right, Lottie?" There was a dreadful, heavy silence.

"Well, I thought you'd like to see Lottie again," Mrs. Callahan said, a catch in her voice. Pa looked at Blondie, whose sympathies were fast going to Lottie. Then he said, trying to be friendly:

"It's nice to see you again, Lottie."

"Lottie—that name sounds so strange," protested the Follies queen.

"Lottie! Dear, dear!"

"Her name is Lurline now," said Mrs. Callahan quickly. "Lurline Cavendish."

"Oh, you've changed your name," said Pa. "You're married?"

"No!" Lurline looked straight at him.

"That's what the police call an alias," chirped up Pete.

"No," said Ma McClune. "It's a

"Yes—well, goodbye!" and Lurline waved jauntily.

They moved toward the door to a chorus of "goodbyes" and "so long's" from the family. Mrs. Callahan was smiling: "Lottie is sending me some sherry, a friend gave her. I'll bring some down..."

"Yes, do, mother," Lurline interrupted. "They'll adore it—old Madeira," and she hurried to join Blondie.

"We have no use for it—thanks all the same," said Pa, coldly.

"You should be mighty proud of Lottie, Mrs. Callahan," Ma said hastily.

"I am," Mrs. Callahan answered as she followed the girls out.

"Proud, ugh!" grunted Pa as he resumed his seat at the dining table. The others took their places, when Pa suddenly reached over to Ma and picked up a sprig of forget-me-not.

"Lottie gave 'em to her mother. I'll keep 'em for a souvenir," said Ma, who was easily impressed.

"We don't want those flowers!" And Pa threw them into the waste paper basket. "We don't want anything in this house that came from that source." And then, as he sank into a chair, he said rather fervently: "Thank God, our Blondie is still a good little girl. That's more to me than all the riches in the world."

In the hallway Lurline turned to her mother: "Goodbye, mother—don't come down," and she kissed her affectionately.

"Goodbye, Lot—er—Lurline. Come again soon, now," and Mrs. Callahan started up the stairs to her flat.

"Got your own car?" said Blondie.

"Of course, child—but I have only one of them with me. Come down and see it. Today I was in a mood for the Rolls." Lurline was very friendly now as the two girls started down toward the tenement entrance.

"Mug—do you remember when you went?"

"Yes—you were afraid—now do you see?"

"Yes!"—said Blondie, faintly. "I see."

"How wrong you were." When Blondie didn't answer: "Oh, this is a dreadful place, my dear. I'd die if I ever had to endure it again! Don't you ever want to get out of this environment?"

"Yes, Lottie, I do," Blondie almost whispered her confession.

As they reached the entrance, Lurline gave one glance at her Rolls Royce limousine and uttered a cry of horror!

DAY BY DAY WITH GOVERNOR PATTERSON

It is difficult to conceive the changes that have occurred in our country from the time that Mr. Hoover was sworn in as president four years ago until today when Mr. Roosevelt is to take the oath that will make him president of the United States.

The contrast is startling.

When President Hoover assumed the office all the outward signs of the times presaged not only a continuance of prosperity but such an augmentation as had never before been witnessed in this or any other land. Big business was in the saddle, held the reins, and directed the course of the steed.

It was an era of spending, of speculation, of riotous living and production.

Such was the temper of the people feverishly pressing forward and grasping for material benefits, that he who raised a voice of warning, was regarded only as a garrulous fault-finder, or a bird of ill-bomen bearing an untruthful and disagreeable message.

The president himself was apparently obsessed with the idea that there would be, and could be, no retreat, that the forces which were dominant and moving forward by day would camp at night on new fields of victory won over the conservative and disorganized troops representing the fear of too rapid progress and commercial expansion.

Mr. Hoover became the prophet of this new and dangerous dispensation and there was everything on the surface to invite an optimism which operated to discourage fear and over stimulate confidence. Had the president been told at the beginning of his term that the latter half of his administration would witness the fulfillment of his roseate hopes and promises for the future, and at the close of his term that the sky would be lowering with distressful ominous clouds of evil which refused to roll away, striking fear to the hearts of the people, he would have dismissed the thought without even consideration.

So would he have done the suggestion that the leaders of big business were unfit for the leadership of a people who needed something more for their development and happiness than mere business enterprise had to offer.

The outgoing president came in to power when the weather was fair and the prospect pleasing, and he retired when the weather has become foul and the eye can find no pleasure in what it rests upon.

The incoming president starts with the burdens of past mistakes upon his shoulders, bearing such a weight as few mortals have ever assumed, and when the record of the next four years is made up, it will then be known whether the contrast will be as great between the ending of two administrations as it is in their beginnings.

The people are now undecieved. They realize their situation and moreover as a rule they are very patient in their distress, perhaps they would be too patient, if they did not know that they themselves must share in whatever blame attaches to their predicament.

But they want relief and after that is afforded they will be ready to do whatever is necessary to prevent a recurrence of their troubles.

When a man is drowning or is sick unto death he does not question the means employed to save his life, and so do the people feel in the emergency which now confronts them.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS

The disposition is to give Mr. Roosevelt as free a hand as he desires or as the exigencies of the occasion call for.

The people will object to nothing that will save them and re-enthroned their confidence in government.

This is a natural state of mind born of necessity.

It's a case where a remedy, however drastic, must be found for the disease.

Mr. Roosevelt is the doctor who is called in when the patient is very ill and not able to minister to himself. On his skill and patience and courage in difficulty much will depend.

We believe he has all these qualities and we are willing to trust him.

We know his own physical infirmity did not break his spirit and destroy his hope, but that the visitation he experienced has strengthened his character and elevated his purposes.

With his own life recently sought by an insane creature, we saw and admired his quiet heroism, and his distress that others had been injured.

With his official family broken up by the sudden death of one of its most valued and prominent members, another test has been made of his strength, and the supreme test will start when he is sworn in as president.

Sometimes men and countries never find themselves except in adversity. And what often seems a curse has a curious way of changing into a blessing. This has been so with our president-elect, and it may be so with our country.—Commercial Appeal.

The Standard force is figuring on throwing a big party when the first train load of real beer reaches the city. They expect to draw the blinds, clear the big stone and cover it with white print paper, get several long loaves of rye bread, a chunk of schweitzer cheese, a few big white onions, some hot mustard and a few pounds of hamburger, and proceed to forget the depression troubles.

A general sales tax to most people sounds very unjust, but if given a little thought it is the only tax that will reach rich and poor alike. The very rich can hide part of their wealth and most of the poor pay no tax at all, not even poll tax. If a general sales tax was on, or even a sales tax on luxuries, money to run the State and Federal Government could soon be raised and come in such small dribs that it would not be felt.

We are all wondering where Mr. Paul Wilson, husband of Frances Perkins, "will sit"?—Milan Standard.

We notice in metropolitan papers, as well as the local, where merchants are paying their good money to tell the public of the good times ahead, the confidence in the Government and the banks, but the Government never pays anything for their boosting and are the biggest grafters of space to be found, while bankers may have confidence in their calling, but pay little or nothing to let the public know of it.

The LaPlata Home Press wonders if it ever occurs to the citizens and merchants of the home town to boost the local newspaper as a matter of good business. They too often take it for granted that the only good business of the home town paper is to boost the citizenship and business ability of the home town. The weekly payroll and overhead of the home paper is as great or greater than nine out of ten of the business ventures in the average small town and every dollar it pays out goes back to places in the home town. Boosting the booster occasionally might not be a bad practice to follow applying to schools and churches as well as to business men.

The most commented on story in last week's Democrat was a paragraph in the Pleasant Events column regarding the party where one table of poker was enjoyed while one table of dice was also in play. Now it seems that there were two poker parties on that Saturday night with neither having any "galloping ponies" for diversified amusement. But the guests at each are said to be under the impression that the Pleasant Events editor was hinting at them. Let us assure them that we did not have them in mind and there must have been three parties that night. In spite of all our efforts to give all the news, we miss out on something most every week as so much goes on in a town the size of Shelby. —Shelby Democrat.

Sympathy seldom is withheld from the man who struggles for recovery from an assassin's bullet. After the lapse of half a century, the two month contest of President Garfield with death is remembered. President McKinley carried on for eight days, amid the prayers and hope of a united people. Major Cermak fought a good fight for something over a fortnight, but it was destined that he should not win. About eighty prominent persons have departed this life by assassination since the passing of President Lincoln. Like Lady Macbeth, they should have died thereafter. No way of stopping actually physical assassination is known at present. Until a means to that end is discovered, everyone at least can refrain from the more subtle assassination which consists in thwarting the efforts of able men of honest purpose, by too free use of bitter and partisan speech.

We see where Hon. Josephus Daniels of North Carolina has been assigned to Mexico City as ambassador from the United States, and he'll make a good one. He has changed a lot since 1896 when he was State Committeeman of North Carolina. Nowadays he seems to be democratic in many ways and at that time he was a short pompous, stuckup somebody from the Tar Heel State. We are not acquainted with the gentleman, though introduced to him away back in 1896 when we both were seated at the same table on a steamer sailing from Norfolk, Va., to New York City to hear William Jennings Bryan deliver his first speech of acceptance. At the same table were Mrs. Daniels, who was a sister of Worth Bagley, the first naval officer killed in the Spanish-American War, and Mr. Bagley. Mrs. Daniels and young Bagley were charming people and very entertaining, while Mr. Daniels was very reserved. Mr. Daniels was short in stature, wore a large black Stetson hat, long tail fringe, Albert coat all buttoned up and kept one hand between the buttons in his coat. He reminded us of a great big toad, and we still think that way. Anyway, he seems to be a real statesman.

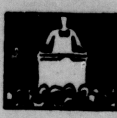

More than forty years ago, John A. Hannay of Versailles, Mo., was Document Clerk of the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C., and roomed at the same place of the editor of The Standard. Last Fall, a letter was received from Mr. Hannay, who was living in Portland, Oregon. A few copies of The Standard were sent to him and in a Versailles paper that he formerly edited the following clipping has been sent to us. Late in February of this year, Mr. Hannay died at the age of 81 years.

"With flowers in mind, Mrs. Bohling of Versailles having in a recent letter referred to my wife's rose garden, I am interested in an editorial in The Skeston (Mo.) Standard, published by C. L. Blanton. The writer enjoyed a pleasurable acquaintance with Charley and his good wife in the early nineties. The editorial relates to flowers himself and wife raised this season, and the pleasure it affords in having shared abundantly with friends. Then from 200 dahlia hills enough were produced in the hot summer time to "gladden the hearts of the sick at the hospital—with dozens upon dozens in cool of the Fall in gorgeous bloom". The Blantons have a fish pond beautified with six varieties to flowers: "When one grows old or are marvells, two of which are of the Oriental variety and bloom at night. "The color and blending of these flowers of each variety," writes Charley, "must be from On High, as mere man can only plant and care for, while no one knows how the delicate shades and tints are imparted". He says the pleasure of dividing these beautiful gifts of nature with friends and the sick is all the Blantons. And then with this tender feeling Charley closes with a beautiful tribute to flowers: When one grows old and the shadows of life hover over you, to live and dream among flowers is a great pleasure that none but those who have journeyed down life's rugged path can enjoy." The writer always knew Charley Blanton was fitted for something a mighty sight better than a government position at Washington City. He is at home in a newspaper office, a profession the Blantons have honored since many long years ago, their grand old father, Ben Blanton, whom I knew intimately as a member of the Missouri Press Association, established the Appeal at Paris, Mo. Next to my wife and "thy neighbor as thyself", the writer loves flowers, the fruit of love—a garden full of beautiful and fragrant roses and allied blooms and blossoms."

The Standard editor has spoken for the privilege of being the first to sign a petition to the Governor for a parole of the two boys recently sent to the State Farm from Bloomfield for an offense. This was brought about by the parole of the third member of the party in Scott County when all were guilty alike.

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 18, 1933, Golden Text: Isaiah 26:13. "O Lord our God, other lords beside thee have had dominion over us: but by thee only will we make mention of thy name."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thus saith the Lord, Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them" (Jer. 10:2).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "That matter is substantial or has life and sensation, is one of the false beliefs of mortals, and exists only in a supposititious mortal consciousness. Hence, as we approach Spirit and Truth, we lose the consciousness of matter" (p-278).

DORCAS CLASS ENJOYS "PRESS" PARTY MONDAY

Members of the Dorcas Class of the First Baptist church were delightfully entertained at a "press" party at the home of Miss Christine Cauthorne Monday evening, with Miss Thelma Lee assisting as hostess. A short business meeting was held at which time it was decided to have a contest between the four groups beginning Sunday, the winning group to be awarded $5.00 toward expenses for a week-end at the Baptist Assembly at Van Buren in July.
After the business meeting, a jig saw puzzle contest was conducted and games pertaining to the press were played, followed by "pressed" refreshments. Miss Dorothy Walker was in charge of the entertainment. Eighteen members and one visitor, Miss Frances Aufdenberg, were present to enjoy the affair.

The next meeting will be held at the church Monday evening, March 27. The members will visit absentees and prospective members from 7:15 o'clock until 7:30, after which a business meeting followed by a sandwich spread will be held at the church. Every member is urged to attend.

It Takes More Than Salts, Calomel, Mineral Waters, Oils, or Laxative Pills to Arouse a Sluggish Liver
They Give Only Temporary Relief From Constipation and Bilioussness, Because They Have No Effect Whatever on the Liver or Its Production of Bile

Bile is nature's own laxative and your stomach and bowels require at least one quart of fresh bile every day to keep them clean, pure, free from fermentation, putrefaction, gas and disease germs.

When your liver becomes torpid or sluggish the bile stagnates and stops flowing freely. The contents of your bowels become the breeding place for germs and poisons; your food does not digest—it just ferments and decays in the bowels. The blood absorbs these poisons and you suffer from constipation, gas, sick headaches, biliousness, nervousness and sour stomach.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills will remove the cause of this condition and purify your entire system in nature's way. They are not like any other medicine you have ever taken. They are so gentle, thorough and natural in their action that there is nothing about them to remind you that you have ever taken a medicine, and most remarkable of all you gradually reduce the dose until you no longer require a laxative at all.

Five years ago it was generally believed that calomel and laxative drugs stimulated the liver, but modern science has proved that calomel, salts, mineral waters, oils and other laxatives have no effect whatever on the liver.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills act directly on the liver because they contain two amazing substances which highest medical authorities agree are the only effective stimulants to the bile-producing activity of the liver known to modern science. These substances stimulate and invigorate the liver to cleanse and purify itself through increasing its production of bile. This fresh bile immediately starts to work neutralizing acids and poisons, stopping fermentation and decay, cleansing and purifying the bowels and sweeping out accumulated poisons.

Unless you have tried Sargon Soft Mass Pills you can have no idea of the effects produced by this natural cleansing of your liver and bowels. It makes you feel years younger, stronger, healthier and happier. It brings back life and color to faded eyes and cheeks, restores the appetite and sound digestion—gives you a new outlook on life itself.

Insist on genuine Sargon Soft Mass Pills. Don't be misled. There are only two known substances which will actually stimulate a torpid or sluggish liver to cleanse and purify itself by increasing its production of bile. Sargon Soft Mass Pills contain both of these substances and no other advertised medicine on the American market today does contain them.

Only 60c for a full 30-day treatment. At your druggist, or write G. F. Willis, Inc., Atlanta, Ga.

CITY OBJECTS TO BILLS WHICH WOULD DESTROY FRANCHISE RIGHTS

Resolutions expressing disapproval of bills which would tend to perpetuate existing franchises held by various public utility companies in the State were sent recently by the City and Board of Public Works to all Missouri legislators, leaders of the Senate and House, and the Lieutenant Governor.

The resolution as filed:
Honorable Member:
This resolution is sent to you asking for your co-operation:

Resolution
WHEREAS, the Missouri State Legislature and Senate are now in session and certain bills have been introduced in these houses which may operate to the detriment of the just rights of the citizens of Sikeston, and,

WHEREAS, the citizens of Sikeston are materially interested in this legislation for the reason that it has in operation a municipally owned electric light plant which is forced to compete with a Utilities Company whose franchise has long since expired, and,

WHEREAS, this City Council has been requested by the Board of Public Works of this City as well as numerous citizens to adopt this Resolution for the purpose of furnishing the law making body of this State with our conclusions relative to the aforementioned proposed legislation, NOW, THEREFORE,

Be It Resolved by the City Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, That this Council go on record as being opposed to House Bills Numbered 253 and 406, which have been presented to the State Legislature, and that we go on record as favoring House Bills Numbered 144, 145, 545, and 558, now pending before the legislature.

Be It Further Resolved, That we express to the State authorities our opposition to any legislation tending to deprive cities in this State of the right to grant franchise to whom it may see fit and that we do not feel that it is proper for a Utilities Company, by the aid of legislation, or any doctrine of estoppel or laches, to deprive the citizens of a community of any rights of self-determination.

Be It Further Resolved, That a copy of this Resolution be mailed to the Governor of this State, to the Lieutenant-Governor as the presiding officer of the Senate, and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Read first, second and third times and passed and approved this 6th day of March, A. D. 1933.

THE AMAZING PARALLEL OF THE ROOSEVELTS

Ripley, the "Believe It or Not" writer, finds an amazing parallel in the lives of the two best known Roosevelts, Theodore and Franklin. He says that both are seventh in descent from Klas Marlsen Van Roosevelt, and both were Harvard graduates, editors of their college papers, graduates of Columbia law school, members of the New York legislature, assistant secretaries of the navy and each resigned from that place, governors of New York, candidates for vice-president, each was shot at by a maniac and both became presidents.

Fifty-three per cent of the potential retail consumers in the United States, and 45 per cent of the retail establishments are located in the country or in cities up to 10,000 population, according to a final report from the Census of Distribution entitled "Analyzing the Small City and Rural Market Area" just issued. These retailers do 30 per cent of the total retail business of the United States, and this amounted to approximately $15,000,000,000 in 1929. In the small city and rural market area there are altogether 15,616 incorporated places of less than 10,000 population, many of which are important trading centers, the report points out.

SCOTT HIGH SCHOOL APPROPRIATION WOULD BE $3161 FROM STATE

Jefferson City.—Scott County will get an appropriation of $3,161.70 for its high school districts from the general revenue fund of the State, if a bill now pending in the house of representatives passes.

The bill proposes the appropriation of $695,268 out of the State treasury to pay deficiency claims of the high school districts for tuition of pupils from other districts.

If the appropriation measure passes, which leaders believe it will, the money would be available to help pay teachers this year. Many high school districts are unable to pay their teachers now. Without this money many teachers will be obliged to teach without pay under a ruling of the State Superintendent of Schools, Charles A. Lee.

The school law provides that high school districts be paid $50 a year tuition by the State for each pupil attending from another district. The deficiency bill would cut this to $23 per pupil.

The amount the various districts in this county would get is as follows:
Ilmo $ 148.50
Fornfelt 261.90
Chaffee 224.10
Benton 288.90
Oran 615.60
Blodgett 83.70

MISS GOODMAN'S SISTER WRITES ABOUT EARTHQUAKE IN CALIFORNIA

Miss Nellie Goodman, member of the local school faculty, is in receipt of a letter from her sister, Mrs. Anne Calvert, of Long Beach, Calif., describing the great earthquake which struck that and other nearby cities last Friday night. Following is an extract from the letter:

"I was in my room preparing the evening meal when the great quake hit. The swing of the quake threw me half way across the room, and, while frightened, I had presence of mind to reach for my heavy coat and purse, and I ran hurriedly from the building. I ran to Fan's home and together we went into the street. Some strangers from the State of Nevada asked us if we desired to leave the city, and we were taken by them to Santa Monica. This city was crowded and accommodations hard to secure, so we wrapped up in blankets and remained in the car all night. The next day I came to Pasadena.

While I am just fine, not hurt in the least, dear old Long Beach is in a terrible condition. Brick and stone houses were first to go—frame houses stood up well. I hear the apartment I left has great cracks in it, stones are out in places, chimneys down and all windows are out. I heard the crash of dishes and the falling of pictures as I left the apartment. All the churches, except one Presbyterian church are terribly wrecked, and three or four schools burned. The Sea Side Hospital went down and the lovely Breakers' Hotel is split in two.

The sister cities are marvelous to Long Beach and everything is being done to alleviate suffering, to feed the hungry, give shelter to the homeless and to safeguard the health of all who are there."

WOMAN'S CLUB NAMES MRS. L. R. BURNS AS PRESIDENT FOR '33

A new slate of officers was selected by the Sikeston Woman's Club at the regular meeting of the organization, held at the home of Mrs. C. C. White last Tuesday afternoon. After hearing reports of standing committees, members participated in the selection of a new group of officers to serve the organization during 1933-34.

The following were elected:
President—Mrs. L. R. Burns;

Vice-President, Mrs. C. L. Blanton, Sr.; Second Vice-President, Mrs. George Dempster; Secretary, Mrs. J. M. Massengill; Treasurer, Mrs. H. E. Reuber; Civics Chairman, Mrs. Wm. Foley; Ways and Means, Mrs. Gid Daniels; Program, Mrs. C. C. White. Directors, Mrs. Arch Russell and Mrs. Calvin Greer.

At the close of the election, Mrs. C. D. Matthews, Jr. gave a most interesting paper on her trip to the Pacific Coast, and through the Panama Canal. This trip lasted five weeks and over 10,000 miles was covered. The large number of ladies present enjoyed Mrs. Matthews' description very much.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. M. Massengill on March the 28th, at which time there will be a guest program by the Apollo Group.

Contributing to the Depression

The manufacturer who related these incidents has, so far as his own company is concerned, taken radical steps to stabilize the cement market. Whenever it is learned that a secret price has been quoted some contractor or dealer in a certain territory, the company immediately notifies all contractors and dealers in the territory that it will meet the secret price. Naturally, this policy has had a deterrent effect on predatory price cutting, because the producer who makes a secret cut faces the fact that his secret price automatically becomes the public price as soon as the facts are unearthed.

Among the executives with whom I have talked there is a decided opinion that the present depression is being prolonged unnecessarily because of predatory price cutting. A prominent executive of the hardware trade whose activities take him on frequent trips about the country said:

"There is every element right now to bring about a mild business boom. Retail hardware stocks are astonishingly low. So low, in fact, that thousands of dealers are losing sales every day because they are out of merchandise their customers want to buy. Wholesalers' stocks are correspondingly low. Manufacturers get along with a minimum of raw materials, and few of them are bringing out new items that might act as trade stimulants. The only reason the trade does not stock up is the fear that prices may go lower. I have talked with dozens of dealers and tried to show them how they are standing in their own light to let their stocks remain so depleted, and the general answer is, 'Yes, we know all that, but it's better to lose a few sales than to load up with stuff that may not be worth as much next month as we paid for it. Who knows whether prices have hit the bottom? Look at the half-price sales that are advertised all up and down the street here.'"

In justice to the retailers of the country, it should be said that during the lush times of the past years they did not always get the consideration that was due them as the most important link in the distribution system. The president of a large wholesale electrical goods concern has told me of an incident that happened a couple of years ago. The manufacturer of a household device approached the wholesaler with a proposition that he should distribute it to the retail trade throughout the country. The device was to be sold at retail for fifty dollars. The wholesaler inquired how much profit there was in it for him, and the manufacturer said 20 per cent.

"That's fine," the wholesaler replied. "How much of a margin are you going to allow the retailers?"

The manufacturer said retailers would also make 20 per cent.

"That's only ten dollars' profit on a fifty-dollar sale," the wholesaler countered. "A merchant can't afford to do that. He has got to spend a lot of time on every sale, and he's got to install the machine in the customer's home, and he's got to send a man out to service it in case anything goes wrong. Besides, he's got to sell some of the machines on installments. Ten dollars won't cover his expenses."

The manufacturer brushed this argument aside with a wave of his hand. "What the retailers can or can't do is nothing to me," he announced grimly. "To Hades with the retailers!"

The wholesaler did not share this viewpoint and the interview ended there.

Frequently the price demoralization of which manufacturers are now complaining starts with manufacturers themselves.

Last year a certain cereal manufacturer invented a scheme that he believed would increase his volume. He announced to wholesalers that he would grant special discounts on quantity purchases. If a wholesaler bought a certain amount during the year he would receive a sizable rebate. If he went above that amount he got a still greater rebate. There was also a third figure with a correspondingly larger rebate if the wholesaler reached it. (To Be Continued)

JACKSON INDIANS ANNEX DISTRICT HOOP HONORS BY DEFEATING DESLOGE

For the sixth time in 18 years the Jackson Indians annexed the title of Southeast Missouri district basketball champions, this time by virtue of a 29 to 20 trouncing handed to challengers from Desloge Saturday night in Hock Field House, Cape Girardeau.

College Preps, favorites to keep the title, were dismissed from consideration by the men of Pete Cunningham by the slender margin of one point. The Lead Belt five turned the tables with a score of 20 to 19.

BULL MOSE HITS CAR INJURING 5 SATURDAY

Charleston, March 13.—Mrs. Emma Clark and little daughters, Janet and Erma, and Misses Jewell, Opal and Dorothy Clark had a narrow escape from death Saturday afternoon while enroute to Cape Girardeau on Highway 61, two miles south of Morley. Their Ford coach was struck by a Bull Mose train going north on the Frisco Railroad. Mrs. Clark was driving and when she suddenly discovered that the train was going to hit the car which was on the crossing, she attempted to turn the car lengthwise with the train, hence the train hit both ends of the car damaging it badly.

Miss Jewell suffered a sprained back, Mrs. Clark a sprained arm, Miss Opal Clark a sprained ankle and Janet Clark a deep cut on the head.

The injured were brought to Sikeston, where they had their wounds dressed before returning to their homes in this city.

Beauty and Brawn

JANE FAUNTZ

Jane Fauntz, of Chicago, who finished third in the Olympic diving finals after winning first place in some of the most difficult dives, won beauty honors too among beautiful athletes from all over the world. Mrs. Lillian Winter Reilly, swimming director at the Illinois Women's Athletic Club, who coached Jane Fauntz, tells the simple training secrets that produced this combination of beauty and brawn.

"A diver must have strength, poise, grace and perfect muscle coordination," she says. "Hard consistent work, balanced by plenty of sleep, is essential. Diet, too, may make or mar an athlete. While there are diet faddists among coaches, a balanced diet including proteins, starches, minerals and sugars, is the formula of most of these super-people of the stadium and swimming pool. I follow this rule and mark fruits and vegetables 'must' on the diet list.

"Candy was once a moot point among trainers. It is primarily an

NATURE KILLS 88 PER CENT HUNTER TAKES ONLY 3 PER CENT. SCIENCE SHOWS

Washington.—Literally millions of birds and animals are pairing now for the renewal of life, and their offspring for the most part are foredoomed to death within the year, according to a bulletin of the American Game Association. Scientists have been at work checking the natural history of several species throughout the year. Dr. Gardiner Bump, superintendent of the Bureau of Game of the New York Conservation Department, has announced findings on Ruffed Grouse, said by some to be the King of Game Birds.

Dr. Bump announces that 57 per cent of ruffed grouse die in the egg, even during the upsurge of the grouse cycle; all of nature seems to increase or diminish by cycles extending over various periods of time. These eggs, Dr. Bump found, were destroyed mainly by predatory creatures, principally crows, snakes, rats and even ants, which swarm into the shell as soon as the baby bird pips it, and destroy the little fellow, actually eating him alive! His mother is powerless to prevent it.

Of the hatched birds, 23 per cent die in the first three months from inclement weather, inherent weakness, predators and miscellaneous minor causes. Eight per cent die as adults from predators. Here is the most enlightening fact of all—only 3 per cent of the adult grouse are killed by hunters! Officials of the association point out that. In the minds of many, it has always been taken for granted that the hunter killed more birds than all other instruments combined.

Nine per cent of the adults, according to Dr. Bump's survey, live into the second year and thus carry a Nature's replenishment.

While this survey was confined to the ruffed grouse only, it is believed that such results as Dr. Bump found will approximate the same losses of most other game birds, the bulletin states.

Average weekly sales in February were $15,275,538, compared with $17,467,077 in 1932, a decrease of $2,191,539. Average weekly tonnage sales were 101,539, compared with 103,203 in February, 1932, a decrease of 1664 tons.

TWO LEAP TO SAFETY. AIRPLANE CRASHES NEAR DEXTER

L. D. Crawford, vice-president of the W. E. Callahan Construction Co., with offices in the Arcade Building, St. Louis, and an unidentified young woman jumped from Crawford's airplane and landed safely with parachutes ten miles northwest of Dexter, Sunday afternoon.

Reached by telephone at Natchez, Miss., Crawford gave the following account of his experience:

"I was flying above the clouds at about 5000 feet. That Ozark territory is no place for a forced landing, and I wanted to have plenty of room to jump in case anything went wrong. The motor quit, and I decided against trying forced landing, although I have been forced down eight times during my flying career and always got away with it. I let myself fall about a thousand feet before pulling the ring on my parachute. The parachute snapped open promptly, and I floated down through the clouds, coming out about 800 feet above the ground. I landed on a hillside, and was not even scratched."

Crawford declined to name his companion or to mention her in his account, except to state that she was unhurt. The plane, a Travel-Air with open cockpit, crashed several yards from where Crawford landed and was demolished. He said he hopes to salvage the engine.

Crawford departed from Curtis-Stenberg Airport, south of East St. Louis, at 11 a. m. Sunday. His destination was St. Joseph, La., where his company has a large construction job.

RURAL SCHOOL BOARDS PLAN TO CUT EXPENSES

Plans for conducting Howell county rural schools next year are being formulated at a series of meetings in West Plains this week and next and budgets for the individual schools are being drawn up, it is announced by Mrs. Effie O. Bess, county school superintendent. A reduction of school expense, necessitated by reduced revenue to be received from the State, is being planned at the meetings. Teachers' salaries for next year, Mrs. Bess believes, will average less than $50 a month. Two years ago the average salary of teachers in rural schools was $70. Members of rural school boards are meeting in the office of Mrs. Bess here each day to arrange for the conducting of their schools next year. The series of meetings will last until March 17. —West Plains Gazette.

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—The extra session of congress is starting off with many millions of people figuratively pounding on its doors and demanding that it do something or other about the banking situation and the economic panic. Demands are being made that it "fix things up."

The demands and appeals, the arguments and the advice that is being laid on the threshold of every office door in the Capitol carry every known scheme, tried and untried, for dealing with the disturbance in the delicate balance of our economic and financial machinery. Freak legislation panaceas, cures and patent remedies that would put a quack doctor to shame are offered. Few of them appear to have been thought through as to the ultimate result, and I gather from the private conversations of senators and representatives that they are becoming just a little bit hardened and calloused about them.

That people everywhere are suffering is known. That the people have a right to demand that the government do what it can is not to be denied. But, seeing the problem from the viewpoint of Washington, your observer is inclined to pause and ask what can congress do? How can congress "fix things up"? What sort of magic can President Roosevelt employ that will start the country back to conditions that will provide employment for the unemployed, food for the hungry, markets for the products of the factory and farm and stability for banks?

The last congress and the last administration tried to solve the problem, and accomplished nothing. No sooner had the Seventy-second congress expired than we heard assertions from those who saw their pet legislation die that things would have been better if only their particular bills had been enacted. But the saner heads among them know and admit that enactment of all the freak bills in the world would not change human nature nor amend the age-old law of supply and demand.

Whether President Roosevelt is developing an economic program that will restore the confidence of the country in its established institutions and traditions, time alone will tell. It will be a slow process. A sifting down of views of many of those upon whom responsibility rests seems to indicate that it may have strength because it is slow in the making. The effects of anything sensational are generally not lasting, it is agreed.

From what many Republicans as well as Democrats have told me, there is some ground for belief that the mere change of control of the government may result in some revival of confidence.

Look at the thing this way: Mr. Roosevelt convinced a good many hundred thousand persons throughout the country in his campaign that he could do a better job of running the government than Mr. Hoover had done. In convincing them, he developed their confidence in him. It is considered, therefore, that Mr. Roosevelt is starting out with wide support. It is claimed that the people will believe in him and his policies at least until the error of his way is shown. In other words, according to the argument as it is advanced from this standpoint, the bulk of the people will be trying to help themselves when they respond to the appeal of their President.

There has been an all-gone feeling, a feeling of exhaustion, evident in the months since the November election. To put it in another form, many persons showed their lack of backbone by asking: what's the use? It is held among many government officials that this condition was directly responsible for further declines in general confidence.

So the hope is, as I see it, not so much in what congress can do but in whether Mr. Roosevelt can conserve or increase the confidence he built among the people. If he succeeds, things will slowly straighten themselves out. If he makes some bad mistakes, or if congress gets out of control, many here believe we may as well permit the depression to wear itself out. Depressions have done that in years gone by. History gives no basis to expect that the present disturbance will be any different in that respect.

The President undoubtedly has started off in the right direction in holding confidence by the selection of his cabinet members. He picked a group which is generally conceded to be well balanced between conservatives and liberals. That fact is made the more apparent from conversations which one hears among the conservatives and the liberals of the President's party in congress. The conservatives claim there are more conservatives in the cabinet than there are liberals and the liberals claim they hold the majority.

In the meantime, however, there is that sickening cry of the suffering; the plea of men who are losing their farms, the wall of those whose savings are being wiped out by failing banks. It gives rise to the question: will congress keep its head and try to enact sound legislation? Or will it yield to the clamor to "fix things up" and attempt to do so by undermining the currency, by voting out additional billions in loans to corporations with incurable diseases and to states to spend every which way, and cause additional burdens of taxes to be saddled on those who carry the load?

There appears to be a very real danger of this situation. Further, there appears to be a very real danger that congress will go too far in harassing big business. I believe it is generally conceded that some big business ought to be harassed, but there must be legitimate business somewhere. I know that many of the Democratic wheelhorses are a little bit alarmed. They think the confidence upon which the President is depending can be undermined in this direction.

As Republican office holders file out from their jobs throughout the country and the Democrats march up to the pie counter under the mandate of the November election, things are transpiring here in Washington that appear to the observers to be something new even in this hub of the political universe. The "regulars" in both major parties are becoming concerned about it.

Ordinarily, when a change in administration has taken place such as we have just experienced, the "ins" stick together and seize all of the spoils and the "outs" sit back awhile and suffer.

To the extent that the "ins" are seizing the spoils, the recent change in control of the government has presented nothing new. But the "outs" are not sitting silently awaiting better luck. They have begun to build battle lines.

In the meantime, within each of the two major parties other movements are taking place. Within the ranks of the Republicans, that is, the old line party men and women, there is a concerted effort to rid the party of the individuals who failed to stand hitched to the Republican platform and candidates. Within the ranks of the Democrats, there is a very definite effort, just as concerted as exists among the Republicans, whereby the conservative wing of the party in power will have its feathers clipped. In other words, the regular Republicans are fighting to retain control of their party and radical Democrats are struggling with a mighty effort to capture control of their party.

The new Democrats apparently feel their oats. They want recognition. It is a problem with which the old-timers have not been compelled to deal before. Frankly they are puzzled.

While this was going on, Senator Norris, of Nebraska, who was elected as a Republican, but who always has been the bell sheep of the progressive flock, was going forward with some ideas of his own about establishing a new bloc. He proposed that those of liberal tendencies band together and organize a group which could maintain a headquarters in Washington, to operate freely and without affiliation with either major party, and to wield the power which he insists they had available to them.

The Norris proposition seemed to be a direct answer to the blast by Senator Reed, the Pennsylvania Republican who often has been described as probably the most regular of all regular Republicans. Senator Reed makes no bones about the situation. He says the time has come to kick out those who have been wearing a Republican label at election times when they are candidates, and who then jump the reservation.

But when Senator Norris announced his idea about the progressive bloc, the Reed declaration assumed new significance to the observers. On the surface, it may seem to be just an ordinary party fight, yet the undercurrent of gossip contains suggestions that here actually may be the beginning of a new alignment in politics.

In every campaign, each major party has fired blank shells at the opponents about their reactionary tendencies. Each party has entered the claim to being better equipped to adapt the federal government to the new conditions. It has happened year after year.

Now, however, as a result of the Reed declaration of principles, the Norris command to the progressives, the movement among the younger members of the house and the generally disturbed conditions, some folks actually are looking for the segregation of conservatives in one party and the radicals in the other.

DAIRY PRODUCTS AND VEGETABLES TAKE TOP PLACE AS INCOME ITEMS

Striking changes in the relative money returns from various farm products have occurred in the last three and one-half years. Dairy products have assumed first class in the amount of gross farm income, a position formerly held by cattle, hogs and sheep as a group. Livestock in 1932 was the second largest source of income and vegetables third. Vegetables last year yielded a higher gross income than did grains, cotton and cottonseed, or poultry and eggs, according to preliminary estimates of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Chickens were produced on approximately 5,372,000 farms out of a total of 6,288,648 farms in the United States in 1930 and 4,615,000 were producers of dairy products. More farmers are affected by the decline in income from poultry and eggs and from dairy products, than are affected by the reduction in income from wheat or cotton.

OFFERS TEN MEANS OF SOLVING DIFFICULTIES

The following plan in brief was submitted this week by A. W. Swacker as a means of alleviating if not solving the economic distress in which the country finds itself. In announcing his plan, Mr. Swacker states: "As a panacea for our present economic and financial troubles, I offer the following ten demands for a true and honest new deal."

1. That all gold be immediately acquired by the Federal Treasurer. That it be revalued by Congress from the present value of $20.67 per troy ounce to $41.34 per troy ounce. That currency be issued by the Federal Government on an economic basis of $2.50 currency for each $1.00 of gold.
2. After this currency has been issued by the Federal Government, to take up all outstanding Government Liberty Bonds and Treasurer Certificates, Soldiers bonus, and recall all legislation other than for liabilities incurred during actual period of war.
3. That no more tax exempt securities be issued of any character by the Federal, State, County or Township organizations.
4. That the power of the National Banks to issue currency be rescinded; and a complete revision of our State and National Banks on a commercial basis only with no subsidiaries; and that no directors or stockholders be allowed to borrow from any bank in which they are interested.
5. That Congress immediately increase the income tax percentage on incomes from $1000 on a graduated scale up to $100,000 and after the net income reaches $100,000, to take all over and above that amount.
6. That a new inheritance tax be enacted with a graduated scale up to $100,000 and anything over that amount to any one person can be taken by the Federal Government, and divided between Federal and State.
7. That public works in all of the various States be at once started, to immediately put to work the unemployed.
8. That Congress pass a law that the minimum price of the major farm products be fixed for three years at a price of $1.00 for wheat, 60c for corn and 10c for cotton. That the grower may be permitted to sell the first year, 75% of those products at the guaranteed minimum price and the remaining 25% on the world price. The second and third years, the percentage to be sold to be fixed by the Government on the basis of surplus.
9. That the various States enact laws removing all taxes from real estate, to obtain revenue; that they increase their income tax rate on incomes from $1000 up to $100,000. The only taxes then against the land would be special improvement taxes, which would be voted only by the property owners in proportion to their holdings and not by the public at large.
10. The consolidation of all Bureaus, Commissions and various offices, where feasible, of Federal, State and County.

SOUTHEAST MISSOURI FUNERAL DIRECTORS OPPOSE ASSOCIATIONS

Twelve Southeast Missouri funeral directors met last Monday night at the Welsh Parlors here and went on record as being opposed to "burial associations" in which a small premium is paid down with the original "membership" and periodic assessments are made. At that time, also, John Albritton announced that a plan to form such an association with himself as head, and Ted Shelby of East Prairie as vice-president would not be completed. Mississippi County newspapers last week stated that the group was in process of being organized.

Those attending the meeting here were T. S. Heisserer and Clyde Poe of Oran, Fred Nummole of Blodgett, Gus and Mrs. Mary Richards of New Madrid, Travis Shelby of East Prairie, Frank Lair and Scott Cotrell of Charleston, H. J. Welsh, G. A. and George Dempster and John Albritton of Sikeston.

The funeral directors agreed among other things that they would be in no way connected with any so-called burial association, or that they would not co-operate with such other directors who might be members. "After careful study and investigation of the past record and experience of such associations we are led to believe them to be economically unsound and therefore questionable," reads one of the statements. The group favored membership in old reliable insurance companies, many of which offer cheap weekly or monthly premium policies to cover burial expenses.

MACHINE INVENTED HERE VENDS PAPS FOR PENNIES

Eggmen of New Hamburg, made a talk on influence of 4-H Club work in his community in which he stated that the clubs were developing leadership in both civic and social work. J. J. Report of the nomination committee which was composed of Tony Gosche, C. W. Cannon and J. S. Hodges was brought in and the following list was approved. Officers for 1933 elected were:

Carl Luper, President; Roy Johnson, Vice-President; C. W. Cannon, Treasurer; T. E. Chewing, Auditor; Alden Pinney, Secretary; J. J. Reiss, Joe Diebold, Arthur Mier, Sayers Tanner, George Buck, Dan Adams, Tony Gosche, J. D. Hodges, Mrs. Charles Diebold, C. A. Stallings, L. W. Revelle, Jack Berg, Arthur Schiwitz, Mrs. Joe Stricker, Louis Albrecht, Fr. H. J. Eggmen, Mrs. Wm. Roth, Joe Pfefferkorn.

The Resoution Committee composed of T. E. Chewing, J. P. Reiss and Joe Pfefferkorn brought in the following resolutions which were adopted as follows:

Be It Resolved, That we sincerely appreciate the co-operation of the judges of the County Court, who have at all times been helpful in their attitude toward our work and have never refused a request that we have made, and we have ever tried to be most economical and reasonable in our needs.

We commend highly the work of our County Agent, R. L. Furry, who has been untiring in his work, constantly striving to give the very best of services to all the people of the county at all times, working for the interests of the farmers and keeping below the lowest estimate that was made for the use of the extension service, actually using $452 less in 1932 than was allotted. Mr. Furry has been especially efficient in the organization of boys' and girls' and women's clubs and at this time has far more of these groups than ever operated in Scott County before.

We appreciate very greatly the work of those who took hold of Neighbor Day and labored unceasingly for the success of the great 1932 occasion. When Chairman Alden Pinney was injured, the people rallied to the aid of our County Agent and committee, in a most commendable manner and the result was that last Neighbor Day was the biggest in some respects that has ever been held.

The newspapers of the County and district have played an important part in our work since last annual meeting day—as they do every year—and we are grateful to the publishers for their splendid support. We appreciate the fact that the College of Agriculture is maintaining the experiment station near Sikeston.

We are glad for the faithful services of the officers, committeemen and stenographer, Alma Dohogne, for the past year.

We feel the County Agent has rendered a valuable service not only to the farmers, but to the government as well, in assisting with the distribution of the federal loan money.

We thank those who have taken part in our program.

We also recommend: The passage of the Frazier Bill introduced by the U. S. Senate to extend farm mortgage loans a longer time and at a low rate of interest.

The we now begin and use every effort to make Neighbor Day a greater day than ever before. That cheaper auto license basing the cost of them, if possible on the weight of the car, rather than the horsepower.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our State and National representatives.

Committee Carl Luper gave a discussion on the work of the experiment station at Sikeston. Meeting adjourned.

He Carried His Business In His Hat

He looked upon paper as an extravagance. And it was. The same kind would be extravagant today. Fortunately for modern business, however, grades of paper have since been developed that have fine surface, rugged strength, proved endurance, practical colors, true uniformity, easy availability—all at a moderate price.

No wonder the modern executive does more real work, makes more decisions, more progress, gets things done more quickly, than the man who "carried his business in his hat" ever dreamed about. Business men today simply won't be tied to detail. They leave that for printed forms to carry. Consequently their minds are free for the important things—constructive planning, thinking ahead.

Letterheads and printed forms suggest the Sikeston Standard—because it is the logical place for such work.

As a matter of fact, Standard service is used by more business organizations, and recommended by more buyers of printing than any other printing concern in the Sikeston territory,

SIKESTON, SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 17, 1933

NUMBER 48

THE EDITOR SAYS—

We have been requested by Layton Finley to not print any more in our paper than necessary in the matter of his complicity in a chicken stealing case. All right Layton, we will print just the minimum amount necessary to inform the public with the true status of the case. Layton, as you know, was turned over to his parents for a period of a year under suspended sentence, pending continued good behavior. That is fine for his reputation, for the reputation of his parents, and other relatives more or less in the public eye. But what about the other two boys who unfortunately were turned over to Stoddard County authorities who do not deal as gently and as "humanely" with chicken thieves? Both of these young men, just as good, just as honest, just as fine, and both with parents as human, and as full of motherly and fatherly love for their youngsters, what about their lot? They have two more years in the school of correction. We have no axe to grind on their behalf, nor are we blood thirsty for vengeance to be wrecked upon young Finley, but if his future record is as unblemished as his past, he will join his companions at Alcoa, and this newspaper will take pleasure in recording that fact. We do this in full realization of the fact that the entire family will feel harshly towards us, but facts as uncovered place the finger of suspicion dangerously near the front doorstep of the young man whose alleged good record, and the honest and earnest promise of his mother, earned for him a stay of execution.

Wheeler and Woolsey in "So This is Africa", on at the Malone Theatre Sunday and Monday nights, was said to be funny and nasty. It is a pretty movie producers do not give us fewer nasty and suggestive pictures and more of the sort that leave a sweet taste in the mouth. This sort of pictures should not be laid at the door of the Malone Theatre manager because he has no choice in what is sent him under his contract. The criticism should be at Will Hayes' door for passing such.

We heard a man say, Monday, that a stone could be thrown from Front Street near Dudley's, and fall on the roof of a house where booze could be purchased by the drink or in quantities. We don't believe this.

In the Charlie Johnson yard on East Malone Avenue is a pussy-willow tree as high as the house that was in full bloom Tuesday morning. Swarms of honey bees were enjoying the fragrance of these blooms and a dozen or more sparrows were enjoying the sweetness of the honey bees. The birds would catch the bees in their beak, give them a pinch and let them fall to the ground, then light and eat the delicate morsel.

More and better beer is the cry and at the same time it will bring in a large amount of taxes. This is one luxury that we'll pay mighty few pennies on.

Whenever we see the numerous bill boards again covered with pictures of pretty girls wearing few clothes, chewing gum and drinking belly wash, we'll believe the depression is being forgotten.

Mr. Roosevelt stepped to the microphone last night and knocked another home run. His message was not only a great comfort to the people, but it pointed a lesson to all radio announcers and public speakers what to do with a big vocabulary, leave it at home in the dictionary. Some people spend a lifetime juggling with words, with not an idea in a carload. Our president took such a dry subject as banking, (and when I say "dry" I mean dry, for if it had been liquid, he wouldn't have had to speak on it at all). Well, he made everybody understand it, even the bankers.—Will Rogers.

A scrip issue does not seem so likely as it did a few days ago, but if scrip is used, either widely or restrictedly, it will carry a weight that will be nation-wide. Conducting business on a scrip basis, or on any equivalent convenient-money basis, is far better than conducting business by means of the old-time shabby State bank bills, under the vogue of which a person had to look up a bank in the "coin detector" before deciding whether to accept a bill or turn it down. Yet things went forward in those days, and they will go forward now. We have been riding a storm of suspicion and uncertainty. The federal government wisely has provided a haven to which all may retire until the gale is past. The wisdom of the people in accepting quietly the relief made available speaks well for the American character.

U. S. Senate Approves Economy Measure Wed. By Overwhelming Vote

After three days and two nights of debate the Senate Wednesday night approved the bill granting President Roosevelt power to reduce veterans' benefits and federal pay to the extent of more than $500,000,000. The vote was 62 to 13, and sent the measure back to the House for approval of a number of minor Senate amendments. The House last Saturday passed the bill by a vote of 266 to 138, and approval is expected, provided the amendments meet with the approval of the president.

Destitute Family Found Living In Boxcar Here

A man and woman and two children, a boy and girl, were found "bunking" in a railway box car on a side track of the Frisco Lines early Thursday morning by Dan McCoy, who had gone to the car to make preparation to ship a load of corn. The woman was lying ill upon the floor of the car with a scanty amount of bed clothing under her. Upon examination local doctors said that she was suffering with a serious case of cancer. After questioning the man, it was learned that they had been sent here from Blytheville, Ark., in a destitute condition, and left there with no place to go. No mention was made of a home, but they said they had been on their way to points north of here, but later told members of the charity committee of the local Board of Aldermen that they would like to go to or near Hot Springs, Ark. Arrangements were made Thursday afternoon to send the family, as far as Poplar Bluff, where they might be picked up and sent to points nearer their destination.

Ben Hart, Negro, Gets Three Years For Series of Home Burglaries

Ben Hart, negro of this city, was sentenced Monday in Scott County Circuit Court to serve three years following his plea of guilty to charges of burglary. Two other charges were waived. Hart and two other negro lads, were arrested February 13 in connection with the recovery of approximately $1000 worth of men's and women's clothing, which over a period of several months, had been stolen from city and rural homes. Hart has served one term in the State prison for chicken theft, and was being held on a similar charge in addition to the burglary writ when arraigned in court Monday. Archie Cook, farmer living south of Sikeston, recognized a topcoat belonging to his son, Monday afternoon, February 13, and caused the arrest of the young negro, who was wearing the garment. Officers searched the cabin occupied by the negro Robert Grays and spent a busy night searching other shacks, recovering hundreds of stolen articles from the Ben Hart and Grays cabin. Terry Davis, a juvenile, charged with attempting to sell a stolen chicken, and with taking a pistol, pleaded guilty Monday. The court deferred punishment and placed Davis in custody of Hubert Boyer, local garage owner. In the case of Herbert M. Evans and others vs. Mary Larkin, the case was dismissed by plaintiffs at the cost. The case of James A. Finch, receiver for the First National Bank vs. John Halter, was continued to next term of court by agreement.

March Wind Hits Semo and Tennessee Towns Tuesday

High winds and hail on Tuesday came in strange contrast to a midsummer day, Monday, ripped thru a corner of Southeast Missouri and swung into Tennessee and Kentucky leaving in its wake, 36 known dead, 200 wounded, and damaging property to the extent of $1,000,000. At Caruthersville the tornado dipped in about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, crumpled one wing of the Southeast Missouri Compress Company, a vacant building formerly occupied by the Menzie Shoe Co., and damaged residence property. The damage was variously estimated at from $25,000 to $50,000, although no lives were lost. Six miles south of Kennett, Mrs. Rance James, 40, was swept from the front porch of her home. The resulting fall broke her right leg just above the ankle. She received treatment in a Memphis hospital. Then the twister whirled across the river and struck a path through Tennessee and Kentucky.

Park Legalizes Beer In Missouri; Measure Now Awaits Federal Action

Missouri joined the list of thirteen States which to date have legalized beer. The return of the popular, foamy beverage awaits formal approval by the Federal Government, and action along that line is expected momentarily, with the possibility of having beer on tap by April 3.

Governor Park signed the Brogan-Roberts bill Wednesday, making it legal to manufacture 3.2 per cent beer in the State. In other words breweries can resume operations as soon as Congress makes the necessary modifications in the Volstead act. Similar action is pending in 24 other State legislatures.

In the meantime, breweries in this State and other parts of the country are making necessary preparations. Grain, barrels, caps

CHARGE FOR HELPING FARMERS APPLYING FOR LOANS IS PROHIBITED

Farmers who apply for loans this year from the $90,000,000 fund authorized by Congress for crop production loans, should refuse to pay any fees for help in the preparation of their loan applications, it was declared by H. F. Clinger, Field Inspector of the Crop Production Loan office, stationed at Sikeston care of Harry A. Smith. The law as enacted by Congress this year specifically prohibits the charging of any fee for the preparation of the application. Mr. Clinger explained, and provides for fine or imprisonment, or both, for any person found guilty of assessing such a charge. Notarial fees, however, are still necessary, as are fees charged by the county recording official for recording the lien given as security for the loan, and for searching the records for prior liens. Prospective borrowers need not write to Washington for application blanks and detailed information about the loans, Mr. Clinger said, but may get that material direct from him. The application blank this year requires a statement of the amount of the loan desired, the number of acres for which seed and fertilizer are to be purchased, the amount desired for feed, and the amount desired for fuel and oil for tractors. The application also requires a statement of the amount of the loan which is to be used for making repairs or for the purchase of other supplies. The sum total of these several items must not exceed the maximum rates per acre specified in the regulations. A legal description of the land on which the crops are to be planted is also required, together with a statement of the acreage of crops grown by the applicant in 1932, and the yields obtained. The applicant is required to file a statement of seed on hand at the time of applying for a loan. To obtain the loan, the application blank stipulates, the applicant must agree to use the money loaned only for the purchase of supplies necessary for crop production in 1933 on the land described. Prospective borrowers must also state that they have neither the means nor the credit with which to secure these production supplies, and that unless the loan is granted, they will be unable to farm in 1933. Significant differences between the 1933 and 1932 regulations governing crop production loans are that this year the maximum permitted to any one borrower is $300, and that, to qualify for a loan, borrowers must agree to reduce their acreage of cash crops 30 per cent below their 1932 acreage, provided their farming operations are above a specified minimum. As in 1932, a first lien on the 1933 crop is required. Loans are to be repaid on or before October 31, 1933. The regulations make it unlawful for any person to dispose of or assist in disposing of any crops given as security for any crop loan, except for the account of the Secretary of Agriculture and provide for fine and imprisonment for violation of such requirement. The regulations require each borrower to agree to plant a garden for home use and to plant sufficient acreage to provide necessary livestock feed.

R. F. C. Grants $4950 to Scott For Months of March and April; County Organization Perfected

An application filed February 24, by the County Court with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was favorably returned last Thursday when the governmental relief agency granted $4950 to Scott County, $2700 of which to be dispensed during March and $2250 during the month of April. With only two full weeks left in which to operate this month, Chairman Alden Pinney of Benton called a meeting of county leaders representing each community last Tuesday night. The session lasted four hours, according to "Buzzy" Watkins, deputy county clerk, who is active secretary of the county organization to distribute the R. F. C. relief loan. It was decided to divide the County into sections along the lines of present road district areas. A chairman and committee will be in active charge of each area to supervise and actually distribute relief orders. The county was finally divided as follows: Those in need of relief in Oran Special Road District, and Road District No. 3 will apply at Oran. Those in Road District No. 9, will be served out of Perkins. Road Districts 10 and 11, Vanduser. Sikeston special road district (except City of Sikeston) and Road District No. 10, Tanner. Road District No. 8, Morley. Road District No. 4, Benton. Those living in Blodgett Special Road District and No. 13, Blodgett. Diehlstadt Special Road District and No. 7, Diehlstadt. Road Districts 5 and 6, Commerce. Part of No. 1, Ilmo. Part of No. 1, Ance. No. 2, Kelso. Fornefelt, Hamburg and Crowder were not included in any particular districts. Crowder, however, will be included in the area served out of the Tanner office. A local chairman in each of the places mentioned will be directly responsible for the distribution of relief orders. Those tentatively named to perform this service in the several communities were: Sayers, Tanner at Tanner, W. J. Page at Crowder, John Michael at Diehlstadt, Roy Green at Blodgett, and Thomas Lett at Morley. Other appointments by the Chairman expected to be made Wednesday. The Court requested relief on the basis of $6.00 per family for the month of March, and $5.00 per family for April, basing this estimate on 450 needy families. It is necessary now, according to Mr. Watkins, to make a careful revision of the list, to weed out some applicants, and to and others actually in need.

RAPIST IS GIVEN TWO YEARS IN PEN

Melvin Lincoln, 24, of Chaffee, was sentenced in Circuit Court Tuesday afternoon to serve two years in the Missouri State Penitentiary, following a jury trial on a charge of rape preferred by Mrs. Bertha Gilder, also of that city. The woman testified that on the night of February 20, she left her home to find her husband, who she believed was frequenting a road house. She was riding a mule, she claims, when Lincoln pulled her from the animal, and attacked her in the middle of a muddy country road. An automobile which passed the scene, swerved around to avoid running over the two, the woman said. Lincoln maintained by attorney, that the act was performed with full mutual consent. Attorneys Bob Daugherty, Roger Bailey and H. C. Blanton had been appointed by the court to defend Lincoln. The jury deliberated about 45 minutes and returned a verdict of guilty, assessing a penalty of two years.

NEW YORK POLICE CALL FOR ALLEGED AUTO THIEF CAPTURED HERE RECENTLY

Representatives of the New York police department arrived in this city Thursday afternoon, and accompanied Arnold Wragge, alleged automobile thief back to the eastern city. Wragge was arrested Wednesday, March 8, when he attempted to trade a spare wheel for gasoline at Jack Matthews' garage here. The young man held since then in the county jail, is alleged to have confessed driving away from a New York garage with a Studebaker automobile entrusted to his care by his employers. It is the property of Dr. Sidney Van DeCar of the Bronx.

NO GOLD HOARDERS FOUND IN SIKESTON

Local banks reported the receipt of small amounts of gold coins deposited "for patriotic reasons" by their customers during the past few days. However, there were no unusually large amounts returned which might be classified as having been hoarded under the provisions of a regulation issued by the secretary of the treasury. The regulation as released by the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, requests member banks: "To prepare and forward to the Federal Reserve Board as soon as possible after March 17, as complete a list as can be made from information obtainable of the names and addresses of all persons who have withdrawn gold from this bank or a member bank in this district since February 1, 1933 and who have not redeposited it in a bank on or before March 17, 1933." Cape Girardeau banks reported the receipt of approximately $11,500 of the basic metal since the request for its return.

NIGHT CHIEF GID DANIELS RESUMES JOB

Gid Daniels, who has been off duty for the past three months, or since December 13, last year, resumed his work as night policeman last Monday night. Daniels stopped a bullet fired by the late Llewellyn J. Hunter, Memphis gunman, who shot his way to freedom after the night policeman and a Highway trooper had escorted him to Senebault's garage for questioning. Bill Carson had been appointed to serve in Daniels' place during his absence.

TELEPHONE COMPANY IS CO-OPERATING WITH PLAN TO BUY INTERN'L SHOES

Sikeston patrons of the Southeast Missouri Telephone Company this month noticed that statements carried a new slogan. It is "Buy International Shoes made in Sikeston—75", and is one item in a general campaign underway to induce more persons to wear shoes made by the factory which maintains a branch locally. The "75" posted on billboards, found on desks, and on coat lapels refers to the seventy-five million dollar sales quota set for 1933 by the company.

A BAD MAN RECAPTURED AFTER JAIL BREAK

Blackie Williams, wanted on a dozen charges ranging from plain, ordinary burglary to larceny of interstate shipments, was captured from the Hillsboro, Mo., jail last Sunday night, was recaptured by the sheriff 24 hours later at Sui-phur Springs. Williams, who is being held for a minor local charge at Hillsboro, is also wanted by a dozen Missouri and Arkansas communities, and by Federal agents.

WOEHLECKE NAMED AS COMMITTEE MEMBER FOR NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

Wm. H. Woehlecke, local horticulturist and greenhouse owner, was recently notified of his appointment as a member of the Missouri Co-operative Committee for the 14th National Flower and Garden Show which will be held at the Arena in St. Louis, March 25 to April 2. Missouri Day has been designated on Wednesday, March 29. The show is one of the greatest educational exhibitions held annually in the United States. It operates under authority of a charter granted by Congress and comes to a city only once in a lifetime. The 1933 show will occupy approximately 160,000 square feet of floor space, and it is estimated that the value of the displays will be considerably over $1,000,000. A total of $25,000 in cash prizes will be awarded for the best exhibits.

Shoe Factory to Open March 27

According to W. L. Hutters, local International Shoe Factory manager, the plant here will be open Monday, March 27. An order to that effect, rescinding previous orders to open Monday, the 20th, was received by Mr. Hutters Thursday morning. The factory was closed temporarily on March.

Both Sikeston banks were permitted by the State Finance Department to open their doors for business Wednesday morning, following a Nation-wide cessation of banking business proclaimed by the President on March 4. The Bank of Sikeston received its permit from the State Department, allowing operation in an unrestricted basis. According to officers of the institution, the bank accepted more deposits Wednesday than on any other previous day in its history. On the other hand, checks written against accounts at the bank were less than the normal total of an average Saturday. In other words, there were no unusual withdrawals. In fact, one regulation provided for by the government, that of restricting withdrawals intended for hoarding did not have to be enforced. Business transacted involved a large total amount of money but the entire "first day" went smoothly and orderly at both institutions.

A permit issued by the State Finance Department is posted in the lobby of the Bank of Sikeston. It provides as follows: This proclamation applies only to banks and trust companies licensed by the Commissioner of Finance to open for business and not otherwise restricted.

PROCLAMATION

Pursuant to the authority granted by the Legislature of the State of Missouri and the Proclamation of the President of the United States, we hereby notify your institution that you are authorized to open for the purposes of:

1. Performing such banking functions as may be performed by banks in your territory which are members of the Federal Reserve System.
2. Which your bank may desire to perform under its charter, subject to the following restrictions:
 - (a) No gold coin, gold bullion or gold certificate shall be paid out.
 - (b) You shall not engage in or permit any transaction in foreign exchange, except such as may be undertaken for legitimate and normal business requirements, for reasonable traveling and other personal requirements, and for the fulfillment of contracts entered into prior to March 6, 1933.
 - (c) Or permit withdrawal of currency for hoarding.
 - (d) Or permit withdrawal of money by any depositor for the purpose of investing same in stocks, securities or other similar investments, unless in the fulfillment of contracts or obligations entered into prior to March 6, 1933.
 - (e) Or permit the withdrawal of any money to be deposited in another bank, trust company or other depository for the purpose of shifting the account from your bank to such depository.
3. You are authorized to permit customers of your bank to check against balances for necessary business transactions in the due course of business of the customer, except as herein set forth.

This order shall be in full force and effect until further notice, March 13, 1933.

GUY B. PARK, Governor
O. H. MOBERLY, Commissioner of Finance
Att. DWIGHT H. BROWN, Secretary of State

The Sikeston Trust Company received permission from the State Banking Department by wire Wednesday morning to open under a restricted withdrawal basis, under which old accounts are subject to a withdrawal of 5 per cent.

All new deposits, those dating from Wednesday, March 15, are subject to full withdrawal or handling in the usual banking manner. There are no restrictions, in other words, on new deposits.

Under the regulations imposed by the State Department, the bank is not permitted to make loans until further notice. All money received on new deposits is kept in cash, government bonds, or in reserve with an approved depository, and is subject to no restrictions whatsoever.

In explanation of the restricted withdrawal proposition, officers of the bank cited the example of a small account. If the total old deposit amounts to $100, the customer would be permitted to check out 5 per cent of that amount, or $5.00. After that the account would be temporarily closed until further notification to the Trust Company by the State Department of Finance to release additional funds.

At least 125 banks or Trust Companies in the State of Missouri are operating at present under similar restrictions.

Officers of the Trust Company reported that their customers displayed a fine spirit of co-operation in the face of the restricted operating order. A relatively large amount of new business was reported under orderly conditions.

Due to the fact that the financial channels of the Nation were closed entirely for more than a week, it will take a few days to work off the peak load under which all financial institutions are working, it was stated. A huge amount of business, held in check during the holiday, is suddenly being released, but employees of both banks "cleaned house" during the period of recess, and in a measure, were prepared for the rush.

TWO BOYS WHO STOLE CHICKENS IN PRISON; THIRD LAD IS FREED

Layton Finley, charged with chicken theft, appeared in Juvenile Court before Judge Frank Kelly Tuesday afternoon and walked out with a deferred sentence, although his two buddies in the hen roost escape of February 15, are incarcerated for two years in the Intermediate Reformatory, known as Alcoa Farms, near Jefferson City.

Finley was represented by Ray Lucas, attorney, who stood by while M. E. Montgomery, prosecuting attorney, outlined the case. The facts, as stated in court, were that two other Sikeston boys drove out to the Finley farm about 5:30 o'clock, brought the lad to town, and later drove back with him.

After completing his chores, he was joined by his two buddies, and the trio then went to the Elmer Grant farm nearby. They were reasonably sure, it was pointed out that the Grant and Finley families were at the Richwoods church, participating in a supper and entertainment. After knocking on the Grant door to make sure no one was at home, the lads repaired to the chicken house, sacked 19 birds (24 were sold) and left. Layton, according to his attorneys, Montgomery and Lucas, became disgusted and decided to have nothing more to do with the affair. The court was informed, however, that the boys had decided to split the proceeds three ways, one-half to the boy owning the car, and one-fourth to each of the other two. Layton did not collect his fourth share, because Stoddard County authorities caused the arrest of Herbert Bandy and J. W. Cox, and recovered $9.92, the entire proceeds of the sale, before the split could be made. The court was informed that Mr. Grant had recovered his prize birds, and that the Dexter commission house had been repaid. In view of the fact that this was Layton's first appearance in court, and on promise of future good conduct, Judge Kelly deferred sentence for one year, and placed the boy under his mother's care.

TRUCK KILLS HORSE WOUNDS RIDER MONDAY

Andy Smith of Marked Tree, Ark., moving to Cape Girardeau by truck, ran into a horse and rider about 5:30 o'clock last Monday afternoon about seven miles north of this city. The animal was killed, and the rider, James Jones, son of the late J. R. Jones, who died three months ago, was injured. He received treatment from Dr. T. C. McClure here for scalp and body wounds, and was removed to his home north of the city that same evening. Friends today reported that his condition was satisfactory. Smith was not held.

ELECTRIC RATES

The story of utility company practices, like the ancient ragman song, is the same old story in the same old way. Salem's municipal electric plant this week cut the light rate in half and is still making money on its investment. Sikeston can relate the same story. The utility company on the other hand will point out that this policy of rate reduction is in line with general practice, and perhaps it is, but it is significant that it is more noticeable, and requests for rate revisions downward are met with more alacrity when municipal ownership, or even talk of it, enters the field. Sikeston still remembers its top step of 13 cents per KWH; then 10 cents, 9 cents and now 8 cents. Salem is proud of its rate, but it cannot even begin to compare with the local rate. Salem receives 10c for the first 50 KWH, Sikeston asks 8 cents for the first 20; Salem has a flat rate of 8 cents for all excess of 50 KWH, whereas the local plant and utility company asks 6c for the second 20 KWH, and 3c for all excess.

It should be pointed out that in 1924 when the Missouri General Utilities Co., operated the Salem plant rates were 20 cents per kilowatt for the first 10 KWH. By the time the municipal plant was put into operation in the Fall of 1929, the top step had dropped 5 cents. Now it is down to a dime, which Salem customers consider very reasonable, as compared with the 33 1/2 per cent higher rate.

Those who have not taken the trouble to find out might ask why? The answer is that municipal electric plants are not required to pay tribute to the huge superstructure of holding companies and mythical financial setups. An instance is at hand. It is no secret. The president of the Missouri Utilities Company recently visited Sikeston. He was an affable gentleman. He is also a vice-president of the Community Light and Power Company which renders certain "services" to the Missouri Utilities Company and other subsidiaries. If the records could be run, it would be found that there is another, a super-holding company, another part of the superstructure to which the Missouri, the Missouri-Arkansas and other high line companies pay a certain per centum of their yearly profits . . . and those profits must come out of earnings, and earnings are based upon rates, which are based upon a per cent of replacement and operating costs. So that Jones finally pays a three-way bill when he pays one.

The Community Light and Power Company renders the following services for which the Sikeston, the Charleston, the Cape Girardeau and other customers of the Missouri Utilities Company pay:
 It offers an accounting service, a purchasing service, new business and advertising service, power engineering service, inspection, corporate, legal, treasury and financial service, and furnishes a central office (in St. Louis) "from which are directed the affairs of Missouri Utilities Company in the communities in which it operates."

On the other hand, the Holding Company, a step removed higher up than the Community Light and Power, furnishes the machinery for financial backing, issuing and floating bond and stock issues, etc. For that "service" the customer also pays.

A concrete example: The Missouri Utilities Company in 1929 according to an audit by the Public Service Commission, manufactured its electricity ready for distribution at a net production cost of 0.886 per KWH. During that same period the Missouri Utilities in Sikeston was receiving from an ordinary household consumer, a rate of 10c for the first 20 KWH ($2.00), which cost the M. U. Co. (17.72c) 6c for the next 20 KWH (cost consumer $1.20, cost M. U. Co. 17.72c) and three cents for all in excess of that amount. (214 KWH cost consumer $6.42, cost M. U. Co. $1.896).

Total cost to consumer $9.62. Total cost of generating necessary electricity $2.25. Almost any business could survive under such conditions.

But the process is removed one step further. Take for instance, the so-called "southern group". What is being paid the parent company for juice now is not known, but in 1929 the cost paid by the company to the company was 4.65c per KWH. It was then resold to the consumer at from 12c down to 7 per KWH.

But to get back to our example. An item that cost $2.00 was sold for $6.00, a spread of $4.00 which in any ordinary business would be considered an ample and sufficient profit. But in the utility business that $4.00 must pay for too many idle horses.

That brings us to a significant statement made by a member of the Board of Public Works in our own city of Sikeston last week.

In speaking of the tremendous spread between generating and distribution costs, and the final sale price to the consumer, this gentleman said: "If Sikeston had its plant paid for now it could sell electricity at one-half of its present figure and still make a reasonable return on its investment."

In the utility game that time never comes. The capital stock is never wiped out, although 12 1/2% of gross revenues is annually figured in for rate making purposes for "depreciation less current maintenance". At that rate, it would take approximately eight years to pay for every line, every pole, every generator, and other items of fixed equipment. At the expiration of that time it would seem reasonable that one of two things would happen, either there would be an entire replacement of equipment, or there would be a substantial reduction to fixed charges upon which rates are based.

The folks at Salem have learned their lesson, and the folks around Sikeston are rapidly learning theirs. There are a few, of course, who are still connected in a business, social or family way with the corporation, but in the main those who preach loyalty to home industry are patronizing home industry.

The State Public Service Commission rulings hold that companies of this type should be permitted to make a fair and equitable return (6 or 7 per cent) on their investment. But we fail to find anywhere an accurate statement of what constitutes the investment.

On one sheet of "operating expenses", we find such items as Donation to Ely Walker & Co., factory at Ilmo $1500; donation to Southeast Missouri Hospital, Farmington, Mo., total contributions (4 items) $2,282.18. "Salary and expenses of W. E. Brewer for assistance in efforts to purchase municipal plants at Maddox, Jackson and New Madrid, $576.15". Election expenses at Oran, Benton, Ill., Mo., and dues in YMCA and Chambers of Commerce $280.65". Those items appear on the audit of the Public Service Commission but were not allowed to be added as operating expense items although so charged.

No wonder Mr. Insull can retire to Greece on a $6000-per-year pension paid by one of his many holding companies.

The earthquake at Long Beach, Calif., and surrounding territory, brings to mind a story of the Federal Building in San Francisco

during the earthquake in that city several years ago. It was in the midst of the worst of the calamity and about the only building that withstood the tremors. In the same city the Government at a later date authorized the erection of a Custom House to cost several million dollars. The contract was let, the foundation laid, when, lo and behold, the contractor found that during the night a great section of the foundation had disappeared. Engineers decided that at one time an arm of the sea had extended under this corner of the building, leaving a bed of quicksand with a crust over it. The heavy foundation broke through the crust and sunk so deep it could not be found. The longest piling would not hold and it was necessary to sink a criss-cross mat of T-iron and concrete until no more could be swallowed before the foundation could be completed. This brings on more public building talk. The Government erected a Custom House in Chicago that cost several million dollars when completed and a few days before it was to be occupied, a large section of the granite cornice broke loose and fell to the sidewalk, large cracks appeared throughout the building, on the other side of the city blocks of buildings bulged up and cracked. The best engineers to be had in the United States were consulted and it was discovered that the solid granite Custom House had been built over a quicksand pocket that ran under the city to the weak spot that bulged up from the immense weight. The unoccupied new building was sold to the Chicago House Wrecking Co. and torn down.

Few things that have occurred during the present generation reflect greater credit upon the American people than the poise and calmness with which the closing of the banks, by President Roosevelt, was received. There were no signs of hopelessness and terror, no congregating at street corners, no closing of places of business. The work of the land, although crippled, went forward as usual. The assurance manifested was not the assurance that disaster would follow, but, rather, the assurance that relief was ahead. There is a general readiness to accept a new medium of exchange, and to cooperate with the government in relieving a situation which, although not all that might be desired, might have been infinitely worse.

In view of the fast driving that is being done in the Orient, one wonders whether there is any connection between the names Jehol and Jehu.

Many months had passed since Blondie last saw Lottie, and this meeting had come so unexpectedly. Standing there in the center of the living room, Blondie blinked hard several times. Could this beautifully groomed woman be her old tenement pal? And then Lottie, ignoring Pete's wisecrack, the sullen look from Pa McClune, and the envious eyes of Gert and Ma McClune, spoke rather loftily to her old friend.

"Well, Blondie, what about you, my dear?"

That broke the spell. It really was Lottie!

"What about YOU?" Blondie retorted, and very sincerely added, "You look swell, Mug."

"Mug?—Ho! Ho!—It seems years, doesn't it?" Lottie tried her best to keep her voice, but Gert helped some by picking up the new baby.

"See the new addition. And his name's Horace," said Gert, showing the none too clean and homely youngster right at Lottie.

"Pretty—!" Lottie started the usual praises, but Gert picked up the end of her fur.

"Is that real silver fox?" asked Gert. Blondie seized the opportunity, reaching for the other end of the neckpiece.

"Yes—it is, isn't it?"—to Lottie.

"Oh, you've changed your name," said Pa. "you're married."

Mrs. Callahan proudly answered the question.

"Of course it is."

"There were admiring 'Oh's' and 'Ah's' from the women, while Pa moved around filling his pipe for the want of something better to do. Lete never stopped eating.

It was Mrs. Callahan's opportunity again, and she took advantage of it, suddenly lifting up Lottie's skirt.

"Want to see something grand?" and the proud mother reached for the garment underneath. "Lace!—Real, old lace!" she bragged, much to Lottie's embarrassment.

"Mother!" exclaimed Lottie, but she permitted the display.

"You can't wash it," Mrs. Callahan continued, "it's gotta be dry cleaned. Shame to hide it under your skirt—"

"An' that ain't all it's a shame to hide," piped up Pete, balancing a forkful of food as he stared at Lottie.

Blondie ended the fashion show by pulling Lottie over to the window.

"Have those shoes made for you?" asked Blondie.

"No. I found a darling little shop, just off Madison—such a quaint Frenchman—he imports!" Lottie was talking affably to Blondie now.

"Oh, yeah!" Blondie was quite sincerely taken with the idea.

"Follies pay you a lot, don't they?" sarcastically from Gert, who could hold back no longer.

"Well, now—!" Lottie started to answer when Pete cut in.

"Why shouldn't a lady have a side line?"

"There was a dead, awkward silence. Pete laughed, almost self-consciously, and Blondie spoke up: "What was that crack meant for?"

Gert, the baby on her hip, turned to Blondie—"You heard?" she started. Then, Pete, realizing that this was going too far for his own comfort, interrupted:

"Ain't I right, Lottie?" There was a dreadful, heavy silence.

"Well, I thought you'd like to see Lottie again," Mrs. Callahan said, a catch in her voice. Pa looked at Blondie, whose sympathies were fast going to Lottie. Then he said, trying to be friendly:

"It's nice to see you again, Lottie."

"Lottie—that name sounds so strange," protested the Follies queen.

"Lottie! Dear, dear!"

"Her name is Lurline now," said Mrs. Callahan quickly. "Lurline Cavendish."

"Oh, you've changed your name," said Pa. "You're married?"

"No!" Lurline looked straight at him.

"That's what the police call an alias," chirped up Pete.

"No," said Ma McClune. "It's a

"Yes—well, goodbye!" and Lurline waved jauntily.

They moved toward the door to a chorus of "goodbyes" and "so long!" from the family. Mrs. Callahan was smiling; Lurline is sending me some shiny a friend gave her. I'll bring some down..."

"Yes, do, mother," Lurline interrupted. "They'll adore it—old Ma deira," and she hurried to join Blondie.

"We have no use for it—thanks all the same," said Pa, coldly.

"You should be mighty proud of Lottie," Mrs. Callahan. Ma said hastily.

"I am," Mrs. Callahan answered as she followed the girls out.

"Proud, igh!" grunted Pa as he resumed his seat at the dining table. The others took their places, when Pa suddenly reached over to Ma and picked up a sprig of forget-me-not.

"Lottie gave 'em to her mother. I'll keep 'em for a souvenir," said Ma, who was easily impressed.

"We don't want those flowers!" And Pa threw them into the waste paper basket. "We don't want anything in this house that came from that source." And then, as he sank into a chair, he said rather fervently. "Thank God, our Blondie is still a good little girl. That's more to me than all the riches in the world."

In the hallway Lurline turned to her mother "Goodbye, mother—don't come down," and she kissed her affectionately.

"Goodbye, Lot—er—Lurline. Come again soon, now," and Mrs. Callahan started up the stairs to her flat.

"Got your own car?" said Blondie.

"Of course, child—but I have only one of them with me. Come down and see it. Today I was in a mood for the Rolls." Lurline was very friendly now as the two girls started down toward the tenement entrance.

"Mug—do you remember when you went?"

"Yes—you were afraid—now do you see?"

"Yes"—said Blondie, faintly. "I see."

"How wrong you were." When Blondie didn't answer: "Oh, this is a dreadful place, my dear. I'd die if I ever had to endure it again! Don't you ever want to get out of this environment?"

"Yes, Lottie, I do." Blondie almost whispered her confession.

As they reached the entrance, Lurline gave one glance at her Rolls Royce limousine and uttered a cry of horror!

DAY BY DAY WITH GOVERNOR PATTERSON

It is difficult to conceive the changes that have occurred in our country from the time that Mr. Hoover was sworn in as president four year ago until today when Mr. Roosevelt is to take the oath that will make him president of the United States.

The contrast is startling.

When President Hoover assumed the office all the outward signs of the times presaged not only a continuance of prosperity but such an augmentation as had never before been witnessed in this or any other land. Big business was in the saddle, held the reins, and directed the course of the steed.

It was an era of spending, of speculation, of riotous living and production.

Such was the temper of the people feverishly pressing forward and grasping for material benefits, that he who raised a voice of warning, was regarded only as a garrulous fault-finder, or a bird of ill omen bearing an untruthful and disagreeable message.

The president himself was apparently obsessed with the idea that there would be, and could be, no retreat, that the forces which were dominant and moving forward by day would camp at night on new fields of victory won over the conservative and disorganized troops representing the fear of too rapid progress and commercial expansion.

Mr. Hoover became the prophet of this new and dangerous dispensation and there was everything on the surface to invite an optimism which operated to discourage fear and over stimulate confidence. Had the president been told at the beginning of his term that the latter half of his administration would witness the unfulfillment of his roscate hopes and promises for the future, and at the close of his term that the sky would be lowering with distressful ominous clouds of evil which refused to roll away, striking fear to the hearts of the people, he would have dismissed the thought without even consideration.

So would he have done the suggestion that the leaders of big business were unfit for the leadership of a people who needed something more for their development and happiness than mere business enterprise had to offer.

The outgoing president came in to power when the weather was fair and the prospect pleasing, and he retired when the weather has become foul and the eye can find no pleasure in what it rests upon.

The incoming president starts with the burdens of past mistakes upon his shoulders, bearing such a weight as few mortals have ever assumed, and when the record of the next four years is made up, it will then be known whether the contrast will be as great between the ending of two administrations as it is in their beginnings.

The people are now undecieved. They realize their situation and moreover as a rule they are very patient in their distress, perhaps they would be too patient, if they did not know that they themselves must share in whatever blame attaches to their predicament.

But they want relief and after that is afforded they will be ready to do whatever is necessary to prevent a recurrence of their troubles.

When a man is drowning or is sick unto death he does not question the means employed to save his life, and so do the people feel in the emergency which now confronts them.

The disposition is to give Mr. Roosevelt as free a hand as he desires or as the exigencies of the occasion call for.

The people will object to nothing that will save them and re-enthroned their confidence in government.

This is a natural state of mind born of necessity.

It's a case where a remedy, however drastic, must be found for the disease.

Mr. Roosevelt is the doctor who is called in when the patient is very ill and not able to minister to himself. On his skill and patience and courage in difficulty much will depend.

We believe he has all these qualities and we are willing to trust him.

We know his own physical infirmity did not break his spirit and destroy his hope, but that the visitation he experienced has strengthened his character and elevated his purposes.

With his own life recently sought by an insane creature, we saw and admired his quiet heroism, and his distress that others had been injured.

With his official family broken up by the sudden death of one of its most valued and prominent members, another test has been made of his strength, and the supreme test will start when he is sworn in as president.

Sometimes men and countries never find themselves except in adversity. And what often seems a curse has a curious way of changing into a blessing. This has been so with our president-elect, and it may be so with our country.—Commercial Appeal.

The Standard force is figuring on throwing a big party when the first train load of real beer reaches the city. They expect to draw the blinds, clear the big stone and cover it with white print paper, get several long loaves of rye bread, a chunk of schweitzer cheese, a few big white onions, some hot mustard, a few pounds of hamburger, and proceed to forget the depression troubles.

A general sales tax to most people sounds very unjust, but if given a little thought it is the only tax that will reach rich and poor alike. The very rich can hide part of their wealth and most of the poor pay no tax at all, not even poll tax. If a general sales tax was on, or even a sales tax on luxuries, money to run the State and Federal Government could soon be raised and come in such small dribs that it would not be felt.

We are all wondering where Mr. Paul Wilson, husband of Frances Perkins, "will sit"—Milan Standard.

We notice in metropolitan papers, as well as the local where merchants are paying their good money to tell the public of the good times ahead, the confidence in the Government and the banks, but the Government never pays anything for their boosting and are the biggest grafters of space to be found, while bankers may have confidence in their calling, but pay little or nothing to let the public know of it.

The LaPlata Home Press wonders if it ever occurs to the citizens and merchants of the home town to boost the local newspaper as a matter of good business. They too often take it for granted that the only good business of the home town paper is to boost the citizenship and business ability of the home town. The weekly payroll and overhead of the home paper is as great or greater than nine out of ten of the business ventures in the average small town and every dollar it pays out goes back to places in the home town. Boosting the booster occasionally might not be a bad practice to follow applying to schools and churches as well as to business men.

The week's commented on story in last week's Democrat was a paragraph in the Pleasant Events column regarding the party where one table of dice was enjoyed while one table of dice was also in play. Now it seems that there were two poker parties on that Saturday night with neither having any "galloping ponies" for diversified amusement. But the guests at each are said to be under the impression that the Pleasant Events editor was hinting at them. Let us assure them that we did not have them in mind and there must have been three parties that night. In spite of all our efforts to give all the news, we miss out on something most every week as so much goes on in a town the size of Shelby—Shelby Democrat.

Sympathy seldom is withheld from the man who struggles for recovery from an assassin's bullet. After the lapse of half a century, the two month contest of President Garfield with death is remembered. President McKinley carried on for eight days, amid the prayers and hopes of a united people. Major Cernak fought a good fight for something over a fortnight, but it was destined that he should not win. About eighty prominent persons have departed this life by assassination since the passing of President Lincoln. Like Lady Macbeth, they should have died thereafter. No way of stopping actually physical assassination is known at present. Until a means to that end is discovered, everyone at least can refrain from the more subtle assassination which consists in thwarting the efforts of able men of honest purpose, by too free use of bitter and partisan speech.

We see where Hon. Josephus Daniels of North Carolina has been assigned to Mexico City as ambassador from the United States, and he'll make a good one. He has changed it not since 1896 when he was State Committeeman of North Carolina. Nowadays he seems to be democratic in many ways and at that time he was a short pompous, stuckup somebody from the Tar Heel State. We are not acquainted with the gentleman, though was introduced to him away back in 1896 when we both were seated at the same table on a steamer sailing from Norfolk, Va., to New York City. I heard William Jennings Bryan deliver his first speech of acceptance. At the same table were Mrs. Daniels, who was a sister of Worth Bagley, the first naval officer killed in the Spanish-American War, and Mr. Bagley. Mrs. Daniels and young Bagley were charming people and very entertaining, while Mr. Daniels was very reserved. Mr. Daniels was short in stature, wore a large black Stetson hat, long tail, Prince Albert coat all buttoned up the buttons in his coat. He reminded us of a great big toad, and we still think that way. Anyway, he seems to be a real statesman.

More than forty years ago, John A. Hannay of Versailles, Mo., was Document Clerk of the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C., and roomed at the same place of the editor of The Standard. Last Fall a letter was received from Mr. Hannay, who was living in Portland, Oregon. A few copies of The Standard were sent to him and in a Versailles paper that he formerly edited the following clipping has been sent to us. Late in February of this year, Mr. Hannay died at the age of 81 years.

"With flowers in mind, Mrs. Bohling of Versailles having in a recent letter referred to my wife's rose garden, I am interested in an editorial in The Skeston (Mo.) Standard, published by C. L. Blanton. The writer enjoyed a pleasant acquaintance with Charley and his good wife in the early nineties. The editorial relates to flowers in having shared abundantly with friends. Then from 200 dahlia hills enough were produced in the hot summer time to 'gladden the hearts of the sick at the hospital—with dozens upon dozens in cool of the Fall in gorgeous bloom'. The Blantons have a fish pond beautified with six varieties to flowers: 'When one grows old or are marvells, two of which are of the Oriental variety and bloom at night. 'The color and blending of these flowers of each variety', writes Charley, 'must be from On High, as mere man can only plant and care for, while no one knows how the delicate shades and tints are imparted'. He says the pleasure of dividing these beautiful gifts of nature with friends and the sick is all the Blantons. And then with this tender feeling Charley closes with a beautiful tribute to flowers: 'When one grows old and the shadows of life hover over you, to live and dream among flowers is a great pleasure that none but those who have journeyed down life's rugged path can enjoy'. The writer always knew Charley Blanton was fitted for something a mighty sight better than a government position at Washington City. He is at home in a newspaper office, a profession the Blantons have honored since many long years ago, their grand old father, Ben Blanton, whom I knew intimately as a member of the Missouri Press Association, established the Appeal at Paris, Mo. Next to my wife and 'thy neighbor as thyself', the writer loves flowers, the fruit of love—a garden full of beautiful and fragrant roses and allied blooms and blossoms'.

The Standard editor has spoken for the privilege of being the first to sign a petition to the Governor for a parole of the two boys recently sent to the State Farm from Bloomfield for an offense. This was brought about by the parole of the third member of the party in Scott County when all were guilty alike.

The Book Club will meet Monday afternoon, March 20, at 3:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. T. A. Martin. Mrs. J. L. Brown will view "The Sheltered Life" by Ellen Glasgow.

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 19, 1933, Golden Text: Isaiah 26:13. "O Lord our God, other lords beside thee have had dominion over us: but by thee only will we make mention of thy name."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thus saith the Lord, Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them" (Jer. 10:2).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "That matter is substantial or has life and sensation, is one of the false beliefs of mortals, and exists only in a supposititious mortal consciousness. Hence, as we approach Spirit and Truth, we lose the consciousness of matter" (p-278).

It Takes More Than Salts, Calomel, Mineral Waters, Oils, or Laxative Pills to Arouse a Sluggish Liver

They Give Only Temporary Relief From Constipation and Biliousness, Because They Have No Effect Whatever on the Liver or Its Production of Bile

Bile is nature's own laxative and your stomach and bowels require at least one quart of fresh bile every day to keep them clean, pure, free from fermentation, putrefaction, gas and disease germs.

When your liver becomes torpid or sluggish the bile stagnates and stops flowing freely. The contents of your bowels become the breeding place for germs and poisons; your food does not digest—it just ferments and decays in the bowels. The blood absorbs these poisons and you suffer from constipation, gas, sick headaches, biliousness, nervousness and sour stomach.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills will remove the cause of this condition and purify your entire system in nature's way. They are not like any other medicine you have ever taken. They are so gentle, thorough and natural in their action that there is nothing about them to remind you that you have ever taken a medicine, and most remarkable of all you gradually reduce the dose until you no longer require a laxative at all.

Five years ago it was generally believed that calomel and laxative drugs stimulated the liver, but modern science has proved that calomel, salts, mineral waters, oils and other laxatives have no effect whatever on the liver.

DORCAS CLASS ENJOYS "PRESS" PARTY MONDAY

Members of the Dorcas Class of the First Baptist church were delightfully entertained at a "press" party at the home of Miss Christine Cauthorne Monday evening, with Miss Thelma Lee assisting as hostess. A short business meeting was held at which time it was decided to have a contest between the four groups beginning Sunday, the winning group to be awarded $5.00 toward expenses for a week-end at the Baptist Assembly at Van Buren in July.

After the business meeting, a jig saw puzzle contest was conducted and games pertaining to the press were played, followed by "pressed" refreshments. Miss Dorothy Walker was in charge of the entertainment. Eighteen members and one visitor, Miss Frances Aufdenberg, were present to enjoy the affair.

The next meeting will be held at the church Monday evening, March 27. The members will visit absentees and prospective members from 7:15 o'clock until 7:30, after which a business meeting followed by a sandwich spread will be held at the church. Every member is urged to attend.

Large audiences were present at each service. The sermons and plan of work by Dr. Thomas appealed to all classes and ages of people not only of the Presbyterian church, but all churches and people of the town and the community were greatly benefited by the revival.

Dr. Thomas is an eloquent speaker and held the attention of his audiences. There were many conversions and new members added to the Presbyterian, as well as other churches of the city.

CITY OBJECTS TO BILLS WHICH WOULD DESTROY FRANCHISE RIGHTS

Resolutions expressing disapproval of bills which would tend to perpetuate existing franchises held by various public utility companies in the State were sent recently by the City and Board of Public Works to all Missouri legislators, leaders of the Senate and House, and the Lieutenant Governor.

The resolution as filed: Honorable Member: This resolution is sent to you asking for your co-operation:

Resolution WHEREAS, the Missouri State Legislature and Senate are now in session and certain bills have been introduced in these houses which may operate to the detriment of the just rights of the citizens of Sikeston, and,

WHEREAS, the citizens of Sikeston are materially interested in this legislation for the reason that it has in operation a municipally owned electric light plant which is forced to compete with a Utilities Company whose franchise has long since expired, and,

WHEREAS, the City Council has been requested by the Board of Public Works of this City as well as numerous citizens to adopt this Resolution for the purpose of furnishing the law making body of this State with our conclusions relative to the aforementioned proposed legislation, NOW, THEREFORE,

Be It Resolved by the City Council of the City of Sikeston, Missouri, That this Council go on record as being opposed to House Bills Numbered 253 and 406, which have been presented to the State Legislature, and, that we go on record as favoring House Bills Numbered 144, 145, 545, and 558, now pending before the legislature.

Be It Further Resolved, That we express to the State authorities our opposition to any legislation tending to deprive cities in this State of the right to grant franchises to whom it may see fit, and that we do not feel that it is proper for a Utilities Company, by the aid of legislation, or any doctrine of estoppel or laches, to deprive the citizens of a community of any rights of self-determination.

Be It Further Resolved, That a copy of this Resolution be mailed to the Governor of this State, to the Lieutenant-Governor as the presiding officer of the Senate, and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Read first, second and third times and passed and approved this 6th day of March, A. D. 1933. N. E. FUCHS, Mayor

THE AMAZING PARALLEL OF THE ROOSEVELTS

Ripley, the "Believe It or Not" writer, finds an amazing parallel in the lives of the two best known Roosevelts, Theodore and Franklin. He says that both are seventh in descent from Klas Marlsen Van Roosevelt, and both were Harvard graduates, editors of their college papers, graduates of Columbia law school, members of the New York legislature, assistant secretaries of the navy and each resigned from that place, governor of New York, candidates for vice-president, each was shot at by a maniac and both became president.

Fifty-three per cent of the potential retail consumers in the United States, and 45 per cent of the retail establishments are located in the country or in cities up to 10,000 population, according to a final report from the Census of Distribution entitled "Analyzing the Small City and Rural Market Area" just issued. These retailers do 30 per cent of the total retail business of the United States, and this amounted to approximately $15,000,000,000 in 1929. In the small city and rural market area there are altogether 15,616 incorporated places of less than 10,000 population, many of which are important trading centers, the report points out.

SCOTT HIGH SCHOOL APPROPRIATION WOULD BE $3161 FROM STATE

Jefferson City.—Scott County will get an appropriation of $3,161.70 for its high school districts from the general revenue fund of the State, if a bill now pending in the house of representatives passes.

The bill proposes the appropriation of $695,268 out of the State treasury to pay deficiency claims of the high school districts for tuition of pupils from other districts.

If the appropriation measure passes, which leaders believe it will, the money would be available to help pay teachers this year. Many high school districts are unable to pay their teachers now. Without this money many teachers will be obliged to teach without pay under a ruling of the State Superintendent of Schools, Charles A. Lee.

The school law provides that high school districts be paid $50 a year tuition by the State for each pupil attending from another district. The deficiency bill would cut this to $23 per pupil.

The amount the various districts in this county would get is as follows: Illinois $ 148.50 Formelt 261.90 Chaffee 224.10 Benton 288.90 Oran 615.60 Blodgett 83.70 Vanduser 213.30 Diehlstadt 612.90 Sikeston 712.80

A three-day convention of the Southeast Missouri Christian Endeavor Union closed here Sunday, with an approximate attendance of 100 to 150 persons, who selected Charleston as the next regular convention site in March, 1934. Two Sikestonians were elected to office Saturday, Walter Weekly, an ex-president, was selected as president of the Southeast Missouri District, and Elmer Poage, vice-president.

Other officers included: Miss Jessie Yeager, Dexter, District Secretary; Miss Helen Wilmer of Poplar Bluff, district treasurer; and superintendents, Milos Bryan of East Prairie, "Prayer Meeting"; Orlo Gunter of Campbell, "Look-out" W. A. Coombs, Illmo, social; Miss Opal Allen, Chaffee "Missionary"; Mrs. E. Hosea, Chaffee junior department and Rev. E. Hutchinson, Dexter, district pastor counselor.

Prominent persons in C. E. work in Missouri and the district who participated in the program here included Homer Allen, State president; Rev. A. C. Crouch, State field secretary; Rev. R. M. Talbert, Cape Girardeau; Rev. B. R. Schwegler, New Madrid; Rev. L. Harrell, Cape Girardeau, and Mrs. W. H. Hoover of this city.

The Colossus of Rhodes, one of the ancient world's "seven wonders", was thrown down by an earthquake and its material sold for junk.

MISS GOODMAN'S SISTER WRITES ABOUT EARTHQUAKE IN CALIFORNIA

Miss Nellie Goodman, member of the local school faculty, is in receipt of a letter from her sister, Mrs. Anne Calvert, of Long Beach, Calif., describing the great earthquake which struck that and other nearby cities last Friday night. Following is an extract from the letter:

"I was in my room preparing the evening meal when the great quake hit. The swing of the quake threw me half way across the room, and, while frightened, I had presence of mind to reach for my heavy coat and purse, and I ran hurriedly from the building. I ran to Fan's home and together we went into the street. Some strangers from the State of Nevada asked us if we desired to leave the city, and we were taken by them to Santa Monica. This city was crowded and accommodations hard to secure, so we wrapped up in blankets and remained in the car all night. The next day I came to Pasadena.

While I am just fine, not hurt in the least, dear old Long Beach is in a terrible condition. Brick and stone houses were first to go—frame houses stood up well. I hear the apartment I left has great cracks in it, stones are out in places, chimneys down and all windows are out. I heard the crash of dishes and the falling of pictures as I left the apartment. All the churches, except one Presbyterian church are terribly wrecked, and three or four schools burned. The Sea Side Hospital went down and the lovely Breakers' Hotel is split in two.

The sister cities are marvelous to Long Beach and everything is being done to alleviate suffering, to feed the hungry, give shelter to the homeless and to safeguard the health of all who are there."

WOMAN'S CLUB NAMES MRS. L. R. BURNS AS PRESIDENT FOR '33

A new slate of officers was selected by the Sikeston Woman's Club at the regular meeting of the organization, held at the home of Mrs. C. C. White last Tuesday afternoon. After hearing reports of standing committees, members participated in the selection of a new group of officers to serve the organization during 1933-34.

The following were elected:

President—Mrs. L. R. Burns; Vice-President, Mrs. C. L. Blanton, Sr.; Second Vice-President, Mrs. George Dempster; Secretary, Mrs. J. M. Massengill; Treasurer, Mrs. H. E. Reuber; Clivics Chairman, Mrs. Wm. Foley; Ways and Means, Mrs. Gid Daniels; Program, Mrs. C. C. White. Directors, Mrs. Arch Russell and Mrs. Calvin Greer.

At the close of the election, Mrs. C. D. Matthews, Jr. gave a most interesting paper on her trip to the Pacific Coast, and through the Panama Canal. This trip lasted five weeks and over 10,000 miles was covered. The large number of ladies present enjoyed Mrs. Matthews' description very much.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. M. Massengill on March the 28th, at which time there will be a guest program by the Apollo Group.

Contributing to the Depression

The manufacturer who related these incidents has, so far as his own company is concerned, taken radical steps to stabilize the cement market. Whenever it is learned that a secret price has been quoted some contractor or dealer in a certain territory, the company immediately notifies all contractors and dealers in the territory that it will meet the secret price. Naturally, this policy has had a deterrent effect on predatory price cutting, because the producer who makes a secret cut faces the fact that his secret price automatically becomes the public price as soon as the facts are unearthed.

Among the executives with whom I have talked there is a decided opinion that the present depression is being prolonged unnecessarily because of predatory price cutting. A prominent executive of the hardware trade whose activities take him on frequent trips about the country said:

"There is every element right now to bring about a mild business boom. Retail hardware stocks are astonishingly low. So low, in fact, that thousands of dealers are losing sales every day because they are out of merchandise their customers want to buy. Wholesalers' stocks are correspondingly low. Manufacturers get along with a minimum of raw materials, and few of them are bringing out new items that might act as trade stimulants. The only reason the trade does not stock up is the fear that prices may go lower. I have talked with dozens of dealers and tried to show them how they are standing in their own light to let their stocks remain so depleted, and the general answer is, 'Yes, we know all that, but it's better to lose a few sales than to load up with stuff that may not be worth as much next month as we paid for it. Who knows whether prices have hit the bottom? Look at the half-price sales that are advertised all up and down the street here.'"

In justice to the retailers of the country, it should be said that during the lush times of the past years they did not always get the consideration that was due them in the distribution system. The president of a large wholesale electrical goods concern has told me of an incident that happened a couple of years ago. The manufacturer of a household device approached the wholesaler with a proposition that he should distribute it to the retail trade throughout the country. The device was to be sold at retail for fifty dollars. The wholesaler inquired how much profit there was in it for him, and the manufacturer said 20 per cent.

"That's fine," the wholesaler replied. "How much of a margin are you going to allow the retailers?" The manufacturer said retailers would also make 20 per cent. "That's only ten dollars' profit on a fifty-dollar sale," the wholesaler countered. "A merchant can't afford to do that. He has got to spend a lot of time on every sale, and he's got to install the machine in the customer's home, and he's got to send a man out to service it in case anything goes wrong. Besides, he's got to sell some of the machines on installments. Ten dollars won't cover his expenses." The manufacturer, brushed this argument aside with a wave of his hand. "What the retailers can or can't do is nothing to me," he announced gruffly. "To Hades with the retailers!"

The wholesaler did not share this viewpoint and the interview ended there. Frequently, the price demoralization of which manufacturers are now complaining starts with manufacturers themselves. Last year a certain cereal manufacturer invented a scheme that he believed would increase his volume. He announced to wholesalers who handled his product that he would grant special discounts on quantity purchases. If a wholesaler bought a certain amount during the year he would receive a sizable rebate. If he went above that amount he got a still greater rebate. There was also a third figure with a correspondingly larger rebate if the wholesaler reached it. (To Be Continued)

BULL MOSE HITS CAR INJURING 5 SATURDAY

Charleston, March 13.—Mrs. Emma Clack and little daughters, Janet and Erma, and Misses Jewell, Opal and Dorothy Clack had a narrow escape from death Saturday afternoon while enroute to Cape Girardeau on Highway 61, two miles south of Morley. Their Ford coach was struck by a Bull Mose train going north on the Frisco Railroad. Mrs. Clack was driving and when she suddenly discovered that the train was going to hit the car which was on the crossing, she attempted to turn the car lengthwise with the train, hence the train hit both ends of the car damaging it badly.

Miss Jewell suffered a sprained back, Mrs. Clack a sprained arm, Miss Opal Clack a sprained ankle and Jane Clack a deep cut on the head.

The injured were brought to Sikeston, where they had their wounds dressed before returning to their homes in this city.

Beauty and Brawn

JANE FAUNTZ

Jane Fauntz, of Chicago, who finished third in the Olympic diving finals after winning first place in some of the most difficult dives, won beauty honors too among beautiful athletes from all over the world. Mrs. Lillian Winter Reilly, swimming director at the Illinois Women's Athletic Club, who coached Jane Fauntz, tells the simple training secrets that produced this combination of beauty and brawn.

"A diver must have strength, poise, grace and perfect muscle coordination," she says. "Hard consistent work, balanced by plenty of sleep, is essential. Diet, too, may make or mar an athlete. While there are diet faddists among coaches, a balanced diet including proteins, starches, minerals and sugars, is the formula of most of these super-people of the stadium and swimming pool. I follow this rule and mark fruits and vegetables 'must' on the diet list."

"Candy was once a moot point among trainers. It is primarily an energy food and I include it in the diet of athletes, stipulating that it be used with meals, just as I have always included it in the diet of my nine-year-old child."

"Jane's measurements are practically perfect. She is five feet seven inches tall and weighs 124 pounds. 'Stream lines' are the ideal proportions for a swimmer or diver and may be achieved by proper training. For reducing, I cut down on the intake of all foods, retaining a balanced diet. Sweets are reduced in proportion with other foods, only the very starchy foods such as potatoes and white bread being banned."

Mrs. Reilly believes that the girl of the Olympics, slender but strong, radiating energy and health, will become the ideal of the American woman, replacing the listless and emaciated victims of fanatical dieting. The rules which made Jane Fauntz an Olympic star, she says, may be followed to advantage by any woman who seeks athletic prowess for beauty.

adult grouse are killed by hunters! Officials of the association point out that. In the minds of many, it has always been taken for granted that the hunter killed more birds than all other instruments combined.

Nine per cent of the adults, according to Dr. Bump's survey, live into the second year and thus carry on Nature's replenishment.

While this survey was confined to the ruffed grouse only, it is believed that such results as Dr. Bump found will approximate the same losses of most other game birds, the bulletin states.

TWO LEAP TO SAFETY. AIRPLANE CRASHES NEAR DEXTER

L. D. Crawford, vice-president of the W. E. Callahan Construction Co., with offices in the Arcade Building, St. Louis, and an unidentified young woman jumped from Crawford's airplane and landed safely with parachutes ten miles northwest of Dexter, Sunday afternoon.

Reached by telephone at Natheez, Miss., Crawford gave the following account of his experience:

"I was flying above the clouds at about 5000 feet. That Ozark territory is no place for a forced landing, and I wanted to have plenty of room to jump in case anything went wrong. The motor quit, and I decided against trying a forced landing, although I have been forced down eight times during my flying career and always got away with it. I let myself fall about a thousand feet before pulling the ring on my parachute. The parachute snapped open promptly, and I floated down through the clouds, coming out about 800 feet above the ground. I landed on a hillside, and was not even scratched."

Crawford declined to name his companion or to mention her in his account, except to state that she was unhurt. The plane, a Travel-Air with open cockpit, crashed several yards from where Crawford landed and was demolished. He said he hopes to salvage the engine.

Crawford departed from Curtiss-Stearns Airport, south of East St. Louis, at 11 a. m. Sunday. His destination was St. Joseph, La., where his company has a large construction job.

RURAL SCHOOL BOARDS PLAN TO CUT EXPENSES

Plans for conducting Howell county rural schools next year are being formulated at a series of meetings in West Plains this week and next and budgets for the individual schools are being drawn up, it is announced by Mrs. Effie O. Bess, county school superintendent. A reduction of school expense, necessitated by reduced revenue to be received from the State, is being planned at the meetings. Teachers' salaries for next year, Mrs. Bess believes, will average less than $50 a month. Two years ago the average salary of teachers in rural schools was $70. Members of rural school boards are meeting in the office of Mrs. Bess here each day to arrange for the conducting of their schools next year. The series of meetings will last until March 17. —West Plains Gazette.

Washington.—The extra session of congress is starting off with many millions of people figuratively pounding on its doors and demanding that it do something or other about the banking situation and the economic panic. Demands are being made that it "fix things up."

The demands and appeals, the arguments and the advice that is being laid on the threshold of every office door in the Capitol carry every known scheme, tried and untried, for dealing with the disturbance in the delicate balance of our economic and financial machinery. Freak legislation panaceas, curealls and patent remedies that would put a quack doctor to shame are offered. Few of them appear to have been thought through as to the ultimate result, and I gather from the private conversations of senators and representatives that they are becoming just a little bit hardened and calloused about them.

That people everywhere are suffering is known. That the people have a right to demand that the government do what it can is not to be denied. But, seeing the problem from the viewpoint of Washington, your observer is inclined to pause and ask what can congress do? How can congress "fix things up"? What sort of magic can President Roosevelt employ that will start the country back to conditions that will provide employment for the unemployed, food for the hungry, markets for the products of the factory and farm and stability for banks?

The last congress and the last administration tried to solve the problem, and accomplished nothing. No sooner had the Seventy-second congress expired than we heard assertions from those who saw their pet legislation die that things would have been better if only their particular bills had been enacted. But the saner heads among them know and admit that enactment of all the freak bills in the world would not change human nature nor amend the age-old law of supply and demand.

Whether President Roosevelt is developing an economic program that will restore the confidence of the country in its established institutions and traditions, time alone will tell. It will be a slow process. A sifting down of views of many of those upon whom responsibility rests seems to indicate that it may have strength because it is slow in the making. The effects of anything sensational are generally not lasting, it is agreed.

From what many Republicans as well as Democrats have told me, there is some ground for belief that the mere change of control of the government may result in some revival of confidence.

Look at the thing this way: Mr. Roosevelt convinced a good many hundred thousand persons throughout the country in his campaign that he could do a better job of running the government than Mr. Hoover had done. In convincing them, he developed their confidence in him. It is considered, therefore, that Mr. Roosevelt is starting out with wide support. It is claimed that the people will believe in him and his policies at least until the error of his way is shown. In other words, according to the argument as it is advanced from this standpoint, the bulk of the people will be trying to help themselves when they respond to the appeal of their President.

There has been an all-gone feeling, a feeling of exhaustion, evident in the months since the November election. To put it in another form, many persons showed their lack of backbone by asking: what's the use? It is held among many government officials that this condition was directly responsible for further declines in general conditions.

So the hope is, as I see it, not so much in what congress can do but in whether Mr. Roosevelt can conserve or increase the confidence he built among the people. If he succeeds, things will slowly straighten themselves out. If he makes some bad mistakes, or if congress gets out of control, many here believe we may as well permit the depression to wear itself out. Depressions have done that in years gone by. History gives no basis to expect that the present disturbance will be any different in that respect.

The President undoubtedly has started off in the right direction in holding confidence by the selection of his cabinet members. He picked a group which is generally conceded to be well balanced between conservatives and liberals. That fact is made the more apparent from conversations which one hears among the conservatives and the liberals of the President's party in congress. The conservatives claim there are more conservatives in the cabinet than there are liberals and the liberals claim they hold the majority.

In the meantime, however, there is that sickening cry of the suffering; the plea of men who are losing their farms, the wall of those whose savings are being wiped out by failing banks. It gives rise to the question: will congress keep its head and try to enact sound legislation to "fix things up" and attempt to do so by undermining the currency, by voting out additional billions in loans to corporations with incurable diseases and to states to spend every which way, and cause additional burdens of taxes to be saddled on those who carry the load?

There appears to be a very real danger of this situation. Further, there appears to be a very real danger that congress will go too far in harassing big business. I believe it is generally conceded that some big business ought to be harassed, but there must be legitimate business somewhere. I know that many of the Democratic wheelhorses are a little bit alarmed. They think the confidence upon which the President is depending can be undermined in this direction.

As Republican office holders file out from their jobs throughout the country and the Democrats march up to the pie counter under the mandate of the November election, things are transpiring here in Washington that appear to the observers to be something new even in this hub of the political universe. The "regulars" in both major parties are becoming concerned about it.

Ordinarily, when a change in administration has taken place such as we have just experienced, the "ins" stick together and seize all of the spoils and the "outs" sit back awhile and suffer.

To the extent that the "ins" are seizing the spoils, the recent change in control of the government has presented nothing new. But the "outs" are not sitting silently awaiting better luck. They have begun to build battle lines.

In the meantime, within each of the two major parties other movements are taking place. Within the ranks of the Republicans, that is, the old line party men and women, there is a concerted effort to rid the party of the individuals who failed to stand hitched to the Republican platform and candidates. Within the ranks of the Democrats, there is a very definite effort, just as concerted as exists among the Republicans, whereby the conservative wing of the party in power will have its feathers clipped. In other words, the regular Republicans are fighting to retain control of their party and radical Democrats are struggling with a mighty effort to capture control of their party.

The new Democrats apparently feel their oats. They want recognition. It is a problem with which the old-timers have not been compelled to deal before. Frankly they are puzzled.

While this was going on, Senator Norris, of Nebraska, who was elected as Republican, but who also was the bell sheep of the progressive flock, was going forward with some ideas of his own about establishing a new bloc. He proposed that those of liberal tendencies band together and organize a group which could maintain a headquarters in Washington, to operate freely and without affiliation with either major party, and to wield the power which he insists had been available to them.

The Norris proposition seemed to be a direct answer to the blast by Senator Reed, the Pennsylvania Republican who often has been described as probably the most regular of all regular Republicans. Senator Reed makes no bones about the situation. He says the time has come to kick out those who have been wearing a Republican label at election times when they are candidates, and who then jump the reservation.

But when Senator Norris announced his idea about the progressive bloc, the Reed declaration assumed new significance to the observers. On the surface, it may seem to be just an ordinary party fight, yet the undercurrent of gossip contains suggestions that here actually may be the beginning of a new alignment in politics.

In every campaign, each major party has fired blank shells at the opponents about their reactionary tendencies. Each party has entered the claim to being better equipped to adapt the federal government to the new conditions. It has happened year after year.

Now, however, as a result of the Reed declaration of principles, the Norris command to the progressives, the movement among the younger members of the house and the generally disturbed conditions, some folks actually are looking for the segregation of conservatives in one party and the radicals in the other.

OFFERS TEN MEANS OF SOLVING DIFFICULTIES

The following plan in brief was submitted this week by A. W. Swacker as a means of alleviating if not solving the economic distress in which the country finds itself. In announcing his plan, Mr. Swacker states: "As a panacea for our present economic and financial troubles, I offer the following ten demands for a true and honest new deal:

1. That all gold be immediately acquired by the Federal Treasurer. That it be revalued by Congress from the present value of $20.67 per troy ounce to $41.34 per troy ounce. That currency be issued by the Federal Government on an economic basis of $2.50 currency for each $1.00 of gold.
2. After this currency has been issued by the Federal Government, to take up all outstanding Government Liberty Bonds and Treasurer Certificates, Soldiers' bonus, and recall all legislation other than for liabilities incurred during actual period of war.
3. That no more tax exempt securities be issued of any character by the Federal, State, County or Township organizations.
4. That the power of the National Banks to issue currency be rescinded; and a complete revision of our State and National Banks on a commercial basis only with no subsidiaries; and that no directors or stockholders be allowed to borrow from any bank in which they are interested.
5. That Congress immediately increase the income tax percentage on incomes from $1000 on a graduated scale up to $100,000 and after the net income reaches $100,000, to take all over and above that amount.
6. That a new inheritance tax be enacted with a graduated scale up to $100,000 and anything over that amount to any one person can be taken by the Federal Government, and divided between Federal and State.
7. That public works in all of the various States be at once started, to immediately put to work the unemployed.
8. That Congress pass a law that the minimum price of the major farm products be fixed for three years at a price of $1.00 for wheat, 60c for corn and 10c for cotton. That the grower may be permitted to sell the first year, 75% of those products at the guaranteed minimum price and the remaining 25% on the world price. The second and third years, the percentage to be sold to be fixed by the Government on the basis of surplus.
9. That the various States enact laws removing all taxes from real estate, to obtain revenue; that they increase their income tax rate on incomes from $1000 up to $100,000. The only taxes then against the land would be special improvement taxes, which would be voted only by the property owners in proportion to their holdings and not by the public at large.
10. The consolidation of all Bureaus, Commissions and various offices, where feasible, of Federal, State and County.

SOUTHEAST MISSOURI FUNERAL DIRECTORS OPPOSE ASSOCIATIONS

Twelve Southeast Missouri funeral directors met last Monday night at the Welsh Parlors here and went on record as being opposed to "burial associations" in which a small premium is paid down with the original "membership" and periodic assessments are made. At that time, also, John Albritton announced that a plan to form such an association with himself as head, and Ted Shelby of East Prairie as vice-president would not be completed. Mississipp County newspapers last week stated that the group was in process of being organized.

Those attending the meeting here were T. S. Heisserer and Clyde Poe of Oran, Fred Nunneley of Blodgett, Gus and Mrs. Mary Richards of New Madrid, Travis Shelby of East Prairie, Frank Lair and Scott Cotrell of Charleston, H. J. Welsh, G. A. and George Dempster and John Albritton of Sikeston.

The funeral directors agreed among other things that they would be in no way connected with any so-called burial association, or that they would not co-operate with such other directors who might be members. "After careful study and investigation of the past record and experience of such associations we are led to believe them to be economically unsound and therefore questionable" reads one of the statements. The group favored membership in old reliable insurance companies, many of which offer cheap weekly or monthly premium policies to cover burial expenses.

Report of the nomination committee which was composed of Tony Gosche, C. W. Cannon and J. S. Hodges was brought in and the following list was approved. Officers for 1933 elected were:

Carl Luper, President; Roy Johnson, Vice-President; C. W. Cannon, Treasurer; T. E. Chewing, Auditor; Alden Pinney, Secretary; J. J. Reiss, Joe Diebold, Arthur Mier, Sayers Tanner, George Buck, Dan Adams, Tony Gosche, J. D. Hodges, Mrs. Charles Diebold, C. A. Stallings, L. W. Revelle, Jack Berg, Arthur Schiowitz, Mrs. Joe Stricker, Louis Albrecht, Fr. H. J. Eggmen, Mrs. Wm. Roth, Joe Pfefferkorn.

The Resolutions Committee composed of T. E. Chewing, J. J. Reiss and Joe Pfefferkorn brought in the following resolutions which were adopted as follows:

Be It Resolved, That we sincerely appreciate the co-operation of the judges of the County Court, who have at all times been helpful in their attitude toward our work and have never refused a request that we have made, and we have ever tried to be most economical and reasonable in our needs.

We commend highly the work of our County Agent, R. L. Furry, who has been untiring in his work, constantly striving to give the very best of services to all the people of the county at all times, working for the interests of the farmers and keeping below the lowest estimate that was made for the use of the extension service, actually using $452 less in 1932 than was allotted. Mr. Furry has been especially efficient in the organization of boys' and girls' and women's clubs and at this time has far more of these groups than ever operated in Scott County before.

We appreciate very greatly the work of those who took hold of Neighbor Day and labored unceasingly for the success of the great 1932 occasion. When Chairman Alden Pinney was injured, the people rallied to the aid of our County Agent and committee, in a most commendable manner and the result was that last Neighbor Day was the biggest in some respects that has ever been held.

The newspapers of the County and district have played an important part in our work since last annual meeting day—as they do every year—and we are grateful to the publishers for their splendid support. We appreciate the fact that the College of Agriculture is maintaining the experiment station near Sikeston.

We are glad for the faithful services of the officers, committeemen and stenographer, Alma Dohogne, for the past year.

We feel the County Agent has rendered a valuable service not only to the farmers, but to the government as well, in assisting with the distribution of the federal loan money.

We thank those who have taken part in our program.

We also recommend: The passage of the Frazier Bill introduced by the U. S. Senate to extend farm mortgage loans a longer time and at a low rate of interest.

The we now begin and use every effort to make Neighbor Day a greater day than ever before.

That cheaper auto license basing the cost of them, if possible on the weight of the car, rather than the horsepower.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our State and National representatives.

Committee Carl Luper gave a discussion on the work of the experiment station at Sikeston. Meeting adjourned.

He Carried His Business In His Hat

He looked upon paper as an extravagance. And it was. The same kind would be extravagant today. Fortunately for modern business, however, grades of paper have since been developed that have fine surface, rugged strength, proved endurance, practical colors, true uniformity, easy availability—all at a moderate price.

No wonder the modern executive does more real work, makes more decisions, more progress, gets things done more quickly, than the man who "carried his business in his hat" ever dreamed about. Business men today simply won't be tied to detail. They leave that for printed forms to carry. Consequently their minds are free for the important things—constructive planning, thinking ahead.

Letterheads and printed forms suggest the Sikeston Standard—because it is the logical place for such work.

As a matter of fact, Standard service is used by more business organizations, and recommended by more buyers of printing than any other printing concern in the Sikeston territory.

BUSINESS AS USUAL

The Bank of Sikeston opened for normal business Wednesday, March 15th. We wish to take this opportunity to thank our depositors and the public in general for their patience during this enforced holiday. We ask the indulgence of our depositors during the next few days until the business that has accumulated over the past ten days can again move as smoothly and as rapidly as under ordinary conditions.

Again we wish to thank our many customers for their continued confidence.
